Carrboro—Charlie Beck of Sanford, who drives a refrigerator truck of flowers twice each week in this section, stopped at the West-Williams Flower Shop last

MODERN DESIGN—The latest thing in beach garb is this two-piece "panel" suit designed by NEA-Acme photographer Mike Ackerman, whose beat is beauty-studded Miami, Fla. Mike's creation features fore-and-aft panels covering a brief panty, with strapless bra tied with double tapes. The rayon taffeta suit is done in a multi-colored print inspired by Seminole tribal designs.

Wednesday and was kind enough to show Mrs. West and me the flowers he was carrying on that trip.

He had dozens of flowers all nicely packaged in lovely arrangements to show the flowers beautifully. He had roses of all colors from Connecticut, orchids from the Thomas Young Gardens in Long Island, asters from California, chrysanthemums from Pennsylvania, ferns, gladiolus from

News Of Soil Conservation

by R. L. Mohler and C. V. Ferguson, Soil Conservation Service

Dr. J. S. Gibson, of the University of North Carolina, assisted by personnel of the Orange County Work Unit, Soil Conservation Service, took his class in physical geography on a field trip last Thursday visiting the farm of the Hogan Brothers and the farm of the Neville Brothers, both in the Carrboro neighborhood. Eighteen members of the class made this field trip, part of whom are teachers attending summer school. These public school teachers and students were very interested in all phases of soil conservation practices being carried out on these farms visited, and asked many questions about the pasture programs, terraces, and contour and strip farming.

Henry Wilson, Chandler's Store of Sanford. They also have a retail shop in Sanford, "Frank's Florist." Three trucks loaded with flowers are on the road daily and cover all of North Carolina. All truck drivers are veterans.

We think a refrigerator truck of flowers from so many different places at your door almost any day in the year, is something special. Florida, Tennessee, and Alabama, orchids from the Carolina Orchid Growers in Pinehurst, and "mums" from the four million chrysanthemums growing on the Gould Farms in Pittsboro. Mr. Beck drives his flower truck all through this section, which includes Charlotte and Greensboro, twice each week.

The owners of the company, "The Carolina Wholesale Florist" in Sanford, are a group of veterans of World War II. President of the company is Tommy Forbes. Other owners are Frank Joyce Jr., Bill Wood Jr. and Johnny Worthy, all neighborhood, reports that the dry weather has not hurt his tobacco and he thinks his row system, along with the terraces in his tobacco fields, is a big factor in helping to hold his moisture. Mr. Wilson says that the very best use has been made of the few showers that have come during the past week in that no water has been lost in a quick run-off since his rows are run with the proper grade.

J. V. Crawford and son, of Orange Chapel neighborhood, are preparing about four acres to be seeded to pasture this fall and to check any washing that might be done during the months until a sod covers the area, terraces have been staked and will be built with equipment on the farm.

This pretty little miss is coy as can be in her fresh cotton pique frock splashed with vivid polka dots. Created by Lil' Alice, the cotton dress is designed to keep the young lady cool and collected in any summer situation.
