

Consolidation Of Charity Drives Cited As Need By Chamber Of Commerce Men

Chapel Hill—It is the consensus of a large per centage of the Southern Chamber of Commerce executives, who held their annual summer Institute at the University of North Carolina this week, that if at least 100 towns in this nation would declare at once that all drives in each town would be federated during the year, and that no other drives would be allowed, the dream of actual consolidation of all drives in each community would become a reality all over the nation.

Federation of all drives in all towns seems to be the main answer to the fund raising question, the executives feel.

A symposium on fund raising and solicitation control has been held here each morning during the Institute and has been conducted by W. Roy Ulrich, manager of the Atlanta, Ga., Chamber of Commerce, who has served as moderator.

A majority opinion was that such agencies as the Red Cross and the polio foundation should be "made" to come into a federated drive.

Harry Krusz, general manager of the Winston-Salem Chamber of Commerce, told the group that his organization was working toward a program which would cut drives in his town to only three a year. One drive would be for cultural agencies, one for charitable and one for capital improvements.

He explained the operation of the "Appeals Review Board" which approves or disapproves of all drives in Winston-Salem at the present.

The discussion was extremely heated throughout the week on this fund raising business which, all executives agreed, was getting worse instead of better. There were many suggestions of panaceas for this ill.

One, and this was only one of scores, was that all business and stores in a town set up a single separate fund at the beginning of each year and when drives came along this fund would supply the money needed if the solicitation was found to be worthy.

Lloyd Foster, general manager of the Birmingham, Ala., Chamber of Commerce, disclosed there had been 88 drives in the past 18 months in that town, while Moderator Ulrich said that 33 major drives for funds had been held in Atlanta during the past year.

Only two towns in the whole southern group seemed to be having much success to date with federation of drives. They Macon, Ga., and Orlando, Fla. There was much discussion about Michigan's plan to federate all drives in that by legislative procedure.

Selecting Farm Youth For Camp

County Forest Warden W. R. Fitzgerald announces that Vocational Agriculture and Agricultural Extension leaders are now selecting FFA and 4-H boys to attend the Annual Forestry Training Camp held by the Dept. of Conservation and Development on August 15-20, at Singletary Lake. Fifty boys who have carried on outstanding forestry projects on their farms will be chosen for this honor. The Seaboard Railroad will also send 20 boys from other Southern States.

The camp, sponsored each year by the member mills of the Southern Pulpwood Conservation Association, will again have a staff of trained foresters to teach the boys the basic principles of farm forestry management, said County Forest Warden Fitzgerald. Timber marking and estimating, tree identification, pacing, and log bucking are some of the things boys will learn.
