Orange Schools Far From Equal

In spite of constitutional and North Carolina legal guarantees of school equality, a large proportion of Orange County's 2,500 Negro school children do not have educational opportunities and facilities equal to those enjoyed by White children.

facilities for the two races. Many of our 16 one, two and three-teacher schools are now being operated under miserable sanitation and health conditions in direct violation of the law, making the county, according to the experts, extremely liable for a suit. There are six one-teacher schools and nine two-teacher cup dispensers, which two of them have bought. A rat was drawn up from the well at Grover school not too long ago and springs utilized in some cases are often muddy.

Toilet facilities at the 16 small schools are limited to the outdoor type and heating is from the pot-bellied stove around which children huddle during the extremely cold weather. Raising the windows is not necessary for adequate ventilation in many cases, because fresh air enters freely through cracks in walls and floors. No janitorial service is provided by the county for these schools, maintenance men being sent out for major repairs. Seven of the 16 are not wired for electricity.

Land abounds around most of these schools and at several the teacher wears boots the year around. Access to the Damascus school is across a log over the creek and when the rain is heavy students must wait until the creek goes down before going to or leaving school, as the case may be. At Grover, pupils must often be ferried across a stream on the back of a mule by their parents. Curricula at many of these schools, naturally, are as limited

Beer Inspector Says 61 Outlets In Orange County

There are sixty-one beer outlets in Orange County, according to Ralph M. Stockard, hardworking Malt Beverage Inspector for Alamance, Orange, and Chatham counties.

Stockard, a resident of Graham, and an experienced law enforcement officer, was a state A.B.C. enforcement officer before joining Malt Beverage Division at its establishment in July.

"We have had the full cooperation of retail beer outlets in this county, as the majority of the retailers realize our department makes it easier for them," Stockard said.

The procedure as outlined by the Malt Division provides for any one desiring to receive a permit for selling beer to contact Stockard for an application blank.

The petitioner will be thoroughly investigated as to the location, general condition, and general reputation by the community. Neighbors of the applicant and local law enforcement agencies will be contacted and court records will be screened to see if the applicant or any employee has been convicted of a felony. Stockard also pointed out that the applicant is also required to either advertise in a local newspaper or post on the door of his premises ten days prior to the issuing of the permit that an application has been made.

When the investigator has made his report to the board in Raleigh the permit is either granted or rejected, usually on the recommendation of the investigator. If approved the permit is then routed to either the town or county board of commissioners for approval or rejection. It was stated that as a general rule, when the state board had approved an application that the local commissioners usually approved it also.

Stockard pointed out that all this investigation prior to the issuance of a permit is done without charge to the applicant. Every beer retail outlet in the county has been contacted, he said and a copy of the state regulations left with the proprietor. It was pointed out that the hours for selling beer are from 7:30 to 11 p.m., and no consumption of beer on the premises is permitted after the prescribed hours.

Continuous visits are made to each outlet, after the permit has been granted and contacts are made with all law enforcement agencies in the three counties to receive complaints or information to determine whether or not the 133 beer outlets are operating according to the state regulations. Very few complaints have been made Stockard stated, but every one made by an officer or a private citizen is thoroughly investigated.

Orange Corn Yield Increased, Says Matheson

Hillsboro—In spite of the fact that this year's climatic conditions were not as favorable as last's for the production of corn, the average yield in Orange County will probably be up, according to Don S. Matheson, county agent.

There is a lot of corn yet to be harvested, but every day farmers report their measured yield for their whole crop. Nelson Wright from near Mebane reported 82 bushels per acre on six and one half acres. Wesley Walker of the St. Marys community has measured more than 50 bushels per acre and Roland Womble, south of Chapel Hill, harvested more corn on two acres than he formerly made on seven. Many other farmers have made between 75 and 80 bushels on a smaller number of acres.

The 60 farmers who entered the corn contest sponsored by the Bank of Chapel Hill have already had their acres measured and the results will be made public at a barbecue supper to be held in the near future.

This new law provides for the construction of one federal building in each congressional district

Scott Pleads For Bond Issue Support In Cedar Grove Talk

Cedar Grove—The State's No. 1 campaigner for progress voiced a vigorous appeal for support of the bond issues for schools and courthouse here yesterday.

Tears welled in his eyes as Governor W. Kerr Scott returned to the section of his forebears to urge a crowd of 300 farmers to "fight militantly" for the bond issue which promises better schools and subsequent rural progress.

Speaking at a membership rally sponsored by the Orange County Farm Bureau, headed by Zeb C. Burton, Scott called for his listeners' continued support of his year-long program to bring better services—electricity, telephones, schools, roads—to rural North Carolina. Pointing out that he had recently visited a total of 28 states, he said he found North Carolina in the forefront of all.

He called the ownership of public services—power and telephones—by the University of North Carolina a "situation which is not wholesome" and said he hoped the University would get rid of them and get some more of its revenue producing property back on the tax books also.

Burton, speaking in behalf of the absent R. Flake Shaw, executive vice president of the State Farm Bureau Federation, explained the purposes and advantages of the organization. R. O. Forrest, Rev. C. S. Hubbard, and Rev. Henry Lewis, members of the steering committee for the bond campaign, spoke in behalf of the two bond issues.

Local People Enjoy Festivities at New York

Typical of the festivities enjoyed by thousands from Orange County last weekend in New York is the scene above, showing Hillsboro residents at the fabulous Diamond Horseshoe, one of the metropolis's most glittering night spots. Miss Mary Frances Rosemond and A. Max Browning, left, are the Hillsboro folks, who were met in New York by Browning's cousin, H. Conway Browning, who is vice-president and treasurer of the Seaboard Terminal and Refrigeration Co., center. Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Calleton of Leonia, N. J., the couple to right, were hosts to Miss Rosemond and Browning during the weekend.

Scores from Hillsboro and literally thousands from Chapel Hill were among the 20,000 fans who made the trip from North Carolina. Many of them flew up for the first time and a fine weekend has been reported by all. Browning and Miss Rosemond flew Eastern Air Lines to New York and when Miss Rosemond brought the first Confederate Flag to the Diamond Horseshoe the large crowd cheered lustily and attention to the Southerners was reported the best throughout the weekend.

Hillsboro—For the second time in a little over two years, Orange County citizens next Tuesday will go to the polls in bond issue elections for better schools and improved courthouse facilities.

This week marks the climax of a vigorous campaign which has been conducted during the past few weeks in behalf of votes for a $1,000,000 bond issue for school building construction and a $250,000 bond issue for constructing a new courthouse on the site of the present county garage and Board of Education offices.

Polls will be open for registered voters in the county's 16 precincts from 6:30 a. m. to 6:30 p. m. Tuesday.

Sample ballots prepared for use in the separate issues indicate voters will have a "yes" or "no" choice on the two following questions:

1. Shall an order finally passed October 17, 1949 authorizing not exceeding $1,000,000 School Building Bonds of Orange County for the purpose of providing funds, with other funds available for such purpose, for erecting additional school buildings, remodeling and enlarging existing school buildings and acquiring any necessary land and equipment therefor, and a tax for said bonds, be approved?

2. Shall an order finally passed October 17, 1949 authorizing not exceeding $250,000 Courthouse Bonds of Orange County for the purpose of providing funds for erecting and equipping a new courthouse upon the site now owned by said county near the present courthouse, and a tax for said bonds, be approved?

Members of the county-wide steering committee which has pushed the bond campaign were optimistic yesterday over prospects for passage of both issues. Opposition to the bonds has not developed on any organized basis, as far as can be ascertained.

The bond money, if realized, will be spent for improvements in all parts of the county, with the largest portion of the funds going for the erection of new buildings for Negroes at Efland, Cedar Grove and Chapel Hill, to enable consolidation of 16 one, two and three teacher schools now in operation at Hillsboro.

Other permanent schools in the county will be remodeled and enlarged to provide vitally needed facilities and to alleviate the crowded condition existing in most of the units.

The Commissioners have promised a 15-cent increase in the county tax rate of .85 if the bonds are passed.
