local attorney, who filed for the Board of Aldermen just three hours before the deadline, brought to nine the number of candidates seeking five public offices in the municipal elections on May 8.

The final entrant, who has been a lawyer here since 1948, is president of the Orange County Young Democrats Club and a member of the Chapel Hill American Legion

This brought the number of persons running for the three seats on the six-man body to six. Other aldermanic candidates are P. L. Burch, incumbent; G. Obie Davis, incumbent; O. K. Cornwell of the University Physical Education Department, running as an unofficial representative of the recentlyannexed Strowd Hill sector; and Giles Horney, supervisor of the University physical plant, and Fred Edwards, 57-year-old Negro builder, who filed late last week. Edwards, the second Negro to seek a council post in Chapel Hill, is a native of Orange and has been active in Negro affairs.
