

Todd To Head Long Meadow Chapel Hill Branch

Durham — R. B. Todd has been appointed manager of the Long Meadow Farms Chapel Hill plant. The announcement was made last week by R. B. Davenport, General Manager of Long Meadow Farms.

Todd has been with Long Meadow since 1947 as Plant Superintendent and Fieldman. His outstanding work in improving the quality of milk among milk producers in this area resulted in his promotion to his new position, Davenport said. Before joining the Long Meadow organization, Todd was Manager of the Latta Dairy Co-op in Hillsboro. Several years ago he was Secretary of the AAA program in Orange County. During the past several years he has been enrolled in short courses in dairying at State College. "Mr. Todd has been a loyal employee ever since he joined Long Meadow. His practical experience in all phases of milk production and plant management qualify him fully for his new position," Davenport said in making the announcement.

Mr. Todd presently is living in Durham. He is married, has three children, and is Sunday School Superintendent of the Bragtown

Hillsboro Tops Eli Whitney In Dixie League

Hillsboro — Hillsboro's Dixie League baseball team defeated Eli Whitney here last Saturday in a tight contest, 9-8.

Hillsboro got off to a fast start in the first with five runs and were never headed. Hitting honors were about even with 11 base knocks apiece, but two home runs by Medlin and one by Heffner were help for Hillsboro.

Hillsboro plays at Caldwell this Saturday.

would rather see private industry do the job, but that the government must step in if industry refuses. He sees nothing wrong in the government providing competition to private industry through such developments as TVA.

On the other hand, Sutton seems convinced that the government is trying to take over private industry. He is opposed to the building of multi-purpose dams. If they are to be built any way, however, he wants the power produced by them to be channeled out through the private power companies. He does not want the government building transmission lines.

He makes a well-taken point that private industry operates more efficiently and more economically than government. Sutton also admits that the consumer is the one who, after all, pays the power companies' taxes.

Both sides seem to be sincere. One believes that the job should be done, regardless of who does it. The other believes that only private industry should operate the power companies, or produce electricity. One believes in advance building for the future -- even if it's done by the government. The other believes in building as you grow, and that being done by private capital.

Out of it all comes the distinct impression that the private power companies in general feel that it is "socialism" for the government to build power plants to serve REA coops and government-run Army and other bases. These same private power companies, however, do not seem to feel it is "socialistic" for the government to build power plants if the private companies have the sole title to all power produced.

In all fairness, however, I think it should be pointed out that Sutton is sincere -- as are practically all other private power company leaders -- in believing that the U. S. Interior Department wants the government to take over the power industry. This would, indeed, be socialism. I think, too, that Governor Scott actually is opposed to complete government-owned and operated power companies, just as he would be opposed to the government taking over the dairy industry. I am sure there are some starry-eyed folks in Washington who would do anything to nationalize electric power. But with the private power companies granted a monopoly, there must be an answer somewhere that will get the job done and at the same time keep power rates low and government control out.

Willis Smith -- the Mr. Smith who went to Washington -- writes letters. A Forsyth County Republican got one, trotted to the press with it, and stirred up more conversation than a courtin' couple at a wake.

In the letter, North Carolina's Junior Senator Smith said a mistake was made in recalling General MacArthur, and "I am inclined to think that his view of the situation and his plan for ending the conflict is nearer correct than any so far advanced."

The senator's letter probably would not have caused so much yapping if either his Washington office had released it or if some good Democrat had been responsible for its being published.

But some of the Graham supporters -- who called Smith a Republican in sheep's clothing last primary -- started up terming him a follow-the-GOPer.

One of the senator's most ardent admirers, a radio news commentator, immediately jumped into the breach and explained that the letter was a "form letter" with hundreds just like it being mailed out to anyone who had written Smith asking his views on the MacArthur episode. It was mere chance, the radioman said, that a Republican happened to be the one who released the letter to the press.

There will be more cussing (and explaining, no doubt about the matter) come 1954 when Mr. Smith seeks to stay in Washington.

The Council of State still hasn't done anything about that boost in the amount the Motor Vehicles Department could spend for cars from $1,500 to $1,650. Council members got the idea cars couldn't be bought for less than $1,500, now want to talk to Col. Landon Rosser about his request. The Colonel hasn't been in town on the days the Council of State met for the last couple of weeks, though. Maybe they'll get around to it one of these days. Meanwhile, the order for 50 Pontiacs for Highway Patrol brass is being held up pending further Council action.
