As North Carolina went, so went Orange County last Saturday as voters in the Democratic Primary piled up heavy majorities for their favorites who, it turned out, were the favorites of the Stae as well.

While voting was not as heavy as the record turnout for the first Graham - Smith primary battle two years ago when major county coffices were also at stake, the total was considerably better than average and well over 1,500 more than voted in the gubernatorial race four years ago.

Orange voters gave William B. Umstead a 1,700 majority for governor and Carl Durham an 1,800 majority to swell the totals of these favorites in the State and district races with desperate opponents, who left no stones unturned to bring them defeat.

In the top county contest. Robert O. Forrest of Hillsboro and Sim L. Efland of Efland retained their seats on the Board of County Commissioners and R. J. M. Hobbs, University professor and former Chapel Hill alderman and mayor pro tem, successfully eliminated two other contenders in the five man race. Forrest polled the top vote with 2,831, followed by Effand with 2,636 and Hobbs with 2,565. R. E. "Bob" Murray of Caldwell with 2,176 and Roland McClamrock of Chapel Hill with Murray got little support in Chapel Hill and McClamroch polled relatively few votes throughout the county's rural pricincts, to account for their losses.

Thus was maintained the residential ballace which has characterized the Orange Board of Commissioners for many years, which many feared would be upset by the entry of two strong candidates from the largest municipality, Chapel Hill.

For a single vacancy on the County Board of Education sought by five candidates, Clarence D. ually high vote of 2,006 to easily er followed by A. K. King with 861, Grover C. Bush with 418 and L. O. Kattsoff with 315.
