Baptist Pastor Plans Sermon To Inspire Giving

Chapel Hill—The deacons of the Baptist Church of Chapel Hill have "unanimously requested" that their pastor, Dr. Samuel Tilden Habel, talk about "money" at the eleven o'clock service on Sunday, November 16.

The laymen had a feeling that the pastor ought to "get tough". One deacon suggested that he "pull out all the stops", indicating that he thought a little "Truman tactics" would be in order. Dr. Habel agreed to comply with the request after it had been "underlined" by the Finance Committee, headed by Dr. Fred Ellis, professor in the U.N.C. Medical School. The minister announced his topic as, "Your Money and Your Life!"

The service Sunday morning will be in preparation for the Harvest Home celebration and Joash's Chest Day on November 23rd. On that day the church will have a Thanksgiving service. A large antique chest will be placed in the front of the sanctuary to receive the pledges of the members to the 1953 budget. The chest will be called "Joash's Chest", recalling a time in Old Testament days when King Joash put a chest in the front of the temple to receive the gifts of the people in order that the temple might be restored.

The proposed 1953 Budget of the Baptist Church of Chapel Hill will total approximately $30,000. It will be presented for adoption at the annual Thanksgiving Dinner Conference of the church, on November 25. The 1953 Budget will contain a line item indicated as the first step of a 5-year Go-Forward Program which will involve the raising of $60,000, beyond the regular operating budget of the church for general improvements and additional full-time church personnel. Included will be a capital fund for the purchase of a new furnace a capital fund for remodeling and renovating the church interior and modernizing the kitchen a capital fund for the acquisition of additional land space the salary of a fulltime Director of Religious Education and additional funds to supplement the fund now being raised among former Baptist students in the University for the purchase of a long-needed pipe organ.

Friends Begin Hospital Fund For E. F. Cude

Hillsboro — The Merchants Association voted Tuesday night to purchase two sets of Christmas decorative lights for use at two entrances to the business section during the Christmas season.

Friends of E. F. Cude, school teacher and former principal of Aycock High School, have been inquiring about his condition. Mr. Cude had a cerebral hemorrhage September 21st, and has been in the Alamance General Hospital, Burlington, since that time. His condition is improved, but he is still in a serious condition.

Many friends have suggested they would like to contribute to the hospital expenses of Mr. Cude, realizing that so long a stay in the hospital is very expensive; therefore, it has been decided to give public notice through the county papers that anyone desiring to help Mr. Cude financially could do so by sending their gift to either of the following people: Rev. Henry B. Lewis, Cedar Grove; Donald McDade, Cedar Grove; Gordon Linder, Cedar Grove.

This is the eighth week of hospitalization, and with the high cost of hospital care it takes little imagination to see what a huge hospital bill is accumulating. An announcement through the papers will be made later apprising the public and friends how much has been given.

University's Radio Station Now On Air Daily

Chapel Hill—WUNC, the non-commercial FM radio station owned by the people of North Carolina and operated by the University of North Carolina and operated by the University in the interest of education, completed its first week of broadcasting this week.

It broadcasts on a frequency of 91.5 megacycles with a power of 1,450 watts.

The new station went on the air Monday, November 3. It can be heard from 7 to 10 o'clock each evening. News, music and dramatic programs are being offered.

Opening of the station marked the culmination of a great deal of hard work and planning as well as the beginning of an operation for which University officials have high hopes.

Chancellor Robert B. House, in announcing WUNC's premiere, referred to the station as "a big stride toward President Gray's goal of making the University become, the heart, the will, the brain and the conscience of the State of North Carolina."

Radio is not new at the University. The Department of Radio is well-established and favorably rated; and the Communication Center, headed by Earl Wynn, has gained national recognition with its prize-winning "University Hour."

More recently, the Center delved into TV, producing 12 educational kinescopes this fall. But WUNC is the first project aimed at bringing to the people of the state the fund of talent, information, and opinion in the University.

In addition, WUNC has the unique feature of being operated entirely by students. Student Manager John Young described the idea of a student staff as "an approach which is duplicated in few, if any, stations with purposes similar to ours."

Assistant manager of WUNC is Tom Carroll, a senior in the Department of Radio from Charlotte. He said he is aware of the responsibilities involved in representing the University, but expressed complete confidence in his staff. Mike Healy of Allendale, N. J., who is program manager, was also optimistic after two weeks of broadcasting.

"With the program resources of the National Association of Educational Broadcasters, British Broadcasting Corporation, and other organizations supplementing our own, we should soon be able to add to the three hours of broadcasting we do each evening."

John Hill of Durham is chief transmitter engineer, and Allan O'Neal of Chapel Hill is studio engineering manager. Kent Jackson, High Point, heads promotion.

Hillsboro — The Board of County Commissioners, wrestling mightily with itself for the correct solution to its problem, voted unanimously Monday night to have a complete reevaluation of property throughout Orange County next year by a professional appraising firm.

The reevaluation will be conducted by the J. M. Clemenshaw Company, of Greensboro, for a fee ranging from $44,000 to $47,500, depending upon whether a long or short form of appraisal is used on machinery and other equipment of industrial firms.

The work will be done between January 15, 1953 and December 1, 1953 under terms of contracts now being reviewed by the county attorney. The complete job will be divided into two separate contracts to enable payment over a two-year period. The sum of $18,000 was appropriated for the project in the budget of the current fiscal year, which ends June 30.

Under the first contract, the firm will appraise industrial and commercial real property and all personal property of commercial establishments exclusive of inventories. All other property will be appraised after July 1, 1953 and prior to December 1, 1953 and will go into effect with the listing of property in January 1954.

The county's last complete reevaluation was in 1947 by a board composed of local citizens.

The reevaluation, as Chairman Collier Cobb emphasized at the meeting of decision Monday night has as its purpose to equalize the valuation of all property of all citizens in every part of the county.

The greater competence and experience of the professional appraiser as well as the inability to obtain a competent local board for the job were major factors in the decision. The board voted against having a tax map made at the time which would have cost approximately $15,000 additional. A decision on whether the long or short form on industrial machinery will be used will be made next year.

Monday night's decision came after Commissioner Sim Efland objected strongly to the amount of the Clemenshaw firm's proposal, which was the lowest of the two received from the only major firms doing this type of work in North Carolina. Efland repeatedly argued that the amount was too high but finally agreed reluctantly to second the motion of Commissioner R. O. Forrest that the firm's bid be accepted. Forrest and Cobb leaned to position that the Board had no choice but to accept the lowest proposal after all three members were in agreement that the professional firm could do the job better.

Henry Lewis of the staff of the Institute of Government, who along with Commissioner Elett R. J. M. Hobbs sat in with the board in an advisory capacity, termed the difference in the amount Efland said the firm should charge and the proposal as negligible in view of the gains which would be realized from the reevaluation. Efland had estimated the cost on the basis of experience in other counties should be $40,800.

RALEIGH Round-up

BIG LOAD . . . It's like this, folks: That fellow Adlai Stevenson is one of the smartest cookies to roll down the pike in some little while, but he just had too much to carry.

Corruption, communism, Korea and Truman—all were piled on his shoulders. And all that time partner Harry was going with a baseball bat after the nearest thing we Americans have had for a hero since the days of old Black Jack Pershing or Lucky Lindy (who flew all alone in a little plane all his own). Like a man that had been called out sliding in home or something, that's the way Harry Truman was tearing about. It just didn't set well.

And then there were the women. They laid the axe to Tom Dewey two times in a row. They didn't like his mustache—and if you don't like the spelling, you need more phonics—and said he looked like the little black-suited guy you see on birthday cakes. The women love Ike like Acheson loves South Koreans.

"I was atotin' this load of light wood up the hill when a dead limb knocked me flat of my face", begins an old cracker barrel tale. Adlai had more than he could get along with—bit off more than he could chew, if you prefer the plug version.

MAYBE LATER . . . Nothing against Adlai, mind you. If everything moves along as planned right after the knockout, don't be surprised if Adlai Stevenson is the man the Democrats will offer up again in 1956. Of course, you immediately harken back to that old spellbinder, William Jennings Bryan, who could lay it on in his day as Adlai has in his'n.

You say well he was nominated, renominated, and renominated, all to no account, and do we want to get on that kind of road again?

Could be? Yes, could be. With all due respect, Bryan was no Adlai. Just a lot of Bryan's speeches were of the listenin' variety: They heard well, but the next day you wondered what in thunder he said that was so good. It wasn't what he said but the way that he said it. Adlai's speeches read, if anything, just a little better than they listen. A place of permanence is his in Bartlett's Familiar Quotations.

Now as for money, William Jennings Bryan probably netted a larger amount touring with chaquetaus during the last 20 years of his life than did Teddy or Taft in their years as President.

Adlai Stevenson could very well be the man in 1956, after the sugar coating has worn off Ike and he has given some fireside chats on the economic frosts expected to begin about a year from now.

BANQUET . . . CIRCUIT

Meantime, Stevenson could get on
