NC Beef Promotion Plan Is Outlined

A proposed state-wide program to promote the use of quality North Carolina beef in competition with the more widely accepted "western" brands has had its inception in Orange County. It will be promoted on a local scale during the week of April 1 and efforts are being planned to extend the idea on a state-wide basis later. Originator of the plan was Everett Kennedy, an official of the local Piedmont Packing Company who presented his ideas to leaders of Durham-Orange cattle breeding associations, Farmers' Exchange officials, extension agents and the press at a meeting at the Durham Agricultural Building Tuesday afternoon. County Agent Don Matheison presided. Kennedy explained his idea was to attempt to dispel the widely held prejudices against "local" beef and for the benefit of North Carolina cattle producers, consumers and merchants to eliminate the vicious circle in which local beef often is purchased locally by the large packers, fattened on Maryland's Eastern shores, slaughtered in Chicago and sold back on North Carolina markets to NC housewives as

"western" beef. NC prime beef bearing the same-grade is the same as western beef, he said. He said most local merchants had agreed to participate in promotion of Carolina beef during the week of April 1. He recommended that the new North Carolina Department of Agriculture (See BEEF, page 8.)

Leaders Optimistic Over Election Prospects; Many Organizations Join In Endorsements

Orange County voters will go to the polls next Tuesday to cast their ballots in a $2,000,000 bond issue election to provide funds for constructing additional school buildings, classrooms and auxiliary educational facilities in the next five years. This week marks the climax of a vigorous campaign which has been conducted by school leaders and interested citizens in both the Orange County and Chapel Hill city administrative systems.

Proponents of the bond issue have carried their campaign during the past several weeks before virtually every civic club, grange and PTA group of both races throughout the county and members of many of them have signed petitions of endorsement, urging their fellow citizens to vote in favor of the bonds.

No organized effort against the issue has been reported. Polls will be open for registered voters in the county's 19 precincts from 6:30 a. m. to 6:30 p. m. Tuesday. This coming Saturday is Challenge Day in the pre-election schedule.

A sample ballot indicating the "yes" or "no" choice on which the citizens will vote is shown at right.

Members of the county-wide steering committee which has pushed the bond campaign were optimistic yesterday over prospects for passage of the issue, but generally warned that those who favor it would have to go to the polls and vote in order to counteract normal apathy in connection with any proposal to spend money and levy taxes.

Remus J. Smith Sr., co-chairman of the steering committee supporting the passage of the bond issue, issued this appeal: "I am confident the people of Orange County are preponderantly in favor of the Bond Issue to provide necessary additional classrooms and other facilities to improve our schools. These improvements will be possible if those who favor better schools will take the trouble to vote on March 27. I urge that every voter make a special effort to go to the polls on Tuesday to the end that the will of the majority may prevail and that a better future for our children may be assured."

Superintendent G. Paul Carr commented on the necessity for the passage of the Bond Issue if local schools are to continue to progress. He said: "The increase in student population in Orange County has been tremendous in the past 10 years. The need for

Mystery Farm Of The Week

Who Owns This Mystery Farm?

Only one guess for last week's mystery farm has come into the office. The owner has not correctly identified it. There has been several who have called asking whose it was, but we are in the dark as to the identity as our readers. Reader Ed Scarlett thought it to be the C. J. Walker's place in the Schley Community. The first to provide the correct identification of the Mystery Farm each week receives a free year's subscription to The News of Orange County. The owner receives a beautifully mounted photo of the farm as it appeared in the paper.

Cashe Boggs Named County Dog Warden

Orange County has a new dog warden to administer the dog control program which has been recognized as one of the most effective in the State.

Cashe Boggs of Hillsboro has been named by the Board of County Commissioners to succeed R. Hume Claytor who set up the program three years ago and has carried it on since that time. Claytor will continue to exercise supervision over the program, but will step up to new duties as a sanitary inspector with the District Health Department, which department has been responsible for the dog program.

Boggs' appointment was made Monday after the Commissioners selected him over six other applicants for the post. He is known widely as a dog lover and has had wide experience in handling them, including vaccinations. He began work immediately.

Boggs is a native of Orange County and for the past nine years has been associated with the plumbing division of Coleman-Laws Co. He served four years in the Army. Claytor has received wide praise for his handling of the dog program in Orange County since its inception. Thousands of additional dogs have been vaccinated and added to the tax books during his tenure, while countless other stray or dangerous animals have been confined or eliminated.
