Umstead Reports Favorable Response To UNC Presentations

BY JOHN W. UMSTEAD
The first real lively debate of the session took place on Thursday when the Prison Industries Bill came to the floor of the House. This Bill provides that all state agencies shall purchase from the Prison Department such supplies and materials as they need in their operation, provided their price is no higher than the standard price for such articles. The intent of the Bill was to give as many prisoners as possible something to do and at the same time make the Prison Dept. as nearly self-supporting as possible. In setting up these industries there would also be the matter of rehabilitation. Many prisoners would be taught trades that would help them greatly in securing jobs after they have served their time and been sent back to civil life. This has been the case in practically all of the states where this plan has been tried.
... The opposition claimed that the State would put private enterprise out of business and really let their imaginations run wild in the predictions they make. It is hard to see how private industry could suffer very much when the entire prison population represents only a very small percentage of the working population of the State. As a matter of fact the Prison Dept. is already engaged in several industries and no private enterprises in the State have suffered. The whole matter under consideration in the Bill is in the hands of the Prison Board and the Budget Commission and it is hard to believe that these businessmen would promote any industry that would really hurt private enterprise in the State.
... Wednesday was Greater University Day before the Appropriations Committee and the presentation by President Friday, his Chancellors and Vice President Carmichael were most impressive. The people of Orange County have a great interest in the appropriations for the University at Chapel Hill and the Medical Affairs Department. This is due to the fact that with the exception of Wake County we have more state employees than any county in the state and our economy is definitely tied up with University appropriations. The attitude of the committee seemed to be favorable since for the first time this year not a single member of the committee left the meeting before the presentation was completed. It is to (See UMSTEAD, Page 2)
