AREA CENSUS SUPERVISORS John McLaughlin in Carrboro and Mrs. Henry Walker for northern Orange said yesterday the 41 enumerators were making good progress in the decennial head-count and hoped to have their preliminary work done after next week. They asked more cooperation, however, in getting advance reports ready for the census takers before they arrive.

TWO POTENTIALLY DISASTROUS fires were averted in Chapel Hill-Carrboro businesses yesterday. In the morning firemen were called to Fitch Lumber Co. where a blaze had caught in the ceiling of the woodwork shop. However employees doused it with their own hose before the trucks arrived. Early in the afternoon an employee at Long Meadow had an accident while re-fueling a gas-powered mower. Flames spread around a furnace in a back room of the building, but were quickly extinguished.

THE NOSE FOR NEWS WAS about to smell smoke when he answered a routine phone message to call Fitch Lumber Co. on Wednesday morning. Somebody picked up the phone said "Haven't got time to talk now," then clicked off the receiver. A minute later the Carrboro fire siren sounded. Nobody needed to tell the Newsman what that alarm was for.

CANDIDATE JOHN LARKINS cut a wide swath through Orange County this past weekend. After the Sixth district rally in Burlington Saturday night and a Sunday with his daughter and family in Hillsboro, the candidate spent Monday handshaking around Hillsboro and Chapel Hill, wringing some hands, two and three times. Monday night he attended what backer Tommy Gardner of Chapel Hill described as a "very enthusiastic" private barbecue at Dr. Jack Moore's pond north of Hillsboro. Gardner said the aim of the feast was to increase Larkin's support from among the "influential" citizens of the county. Attendance was described variously as from about a dozen to 50 by some of those in attendance. After dinner he spoke to 50 "Ladies For Larkins" at Colonial Inn.

FAMILY TREES AND TIES IN Orange have already been noted for gubernatorial aspirants Terry Sanford, Malcolm Seawell, and John Larkins. But we failed to call attention to Beverly Lake's niece, Mrs. Allen Walker Jr., of Hillsboro. Dr. Lake gave her away in her wedding. So much for the Division of Local Democratic Loy-
