CHAPEL HILL MAYOR OLLIE Cornwell, recovering from a serious illness at Memorial Hospital, is expected to be allowed to return home tomorrow. It was understood that he was admitted to the Hospital with a heart ailment after over-exerting himself while moving some furniture at home. His visitors at the Hospital have been restricted.

THE HIGHLY-SUCCESSFUL Mardi Gras ball staged under sponsorship of Alliance Francaise in Chapel Hill Tuesday night will definitely become an annual traditional affair, according to Alliance President Jacques Hardre. Over 250 persons turned out for the costume party in the American Legion Clubhouse. The sponsors added that their objective—to raise $500 in order to send a French teacher to France for summer study—appears to have been reached.

AMONG THE PRIZE-WINNERS in the Mardi Gras costume competition was Joan Williams. The judges tabbed her a "black lioness" in announcing the award. —However, she accepted her prize as a French poodle. Dr. Ernie Craige won the "most original costume" prize as King Neptune. His wife was Ondine. Mrs. Irene Reichert also won for her masquerade as a water sprite. Rush Beeler—with Helen Jane Wettach and Nancy Cornelius—for the Alice in Wonderland playing cards, and Tom Hannaford, as an Arab sultan.

SPECTATORS AT THE PAS-sion Play report it to be a fine two-hour program. Final showings at Memorial Hall today—2 p.m. and 8:15. The travelling company didn't include a number of needed "extras" so some of the American Legionnaires who've been acting as ushers were pressed into curtain-time service as Biblical era walk-on characters.

THE NEATLY-STACKED OLD bricks from the demolished Masonic lodge hall in Chapel Hill are to be used by contractor Andy Shearer for a new home he's planning to build. Massive interior beams from the building were turned over to the American Legion, which plans in time to put up a hut on its property for the use of the Boy Scouts. One ardent lover of relics asked to have the doors to the 106-year-old building—and she got 'em, free.

AN UNUSUAL THEFT DE-tection system has been installed at Sutton's Drugstore in Chapel Hill. Big convex mirrors are posted in various spots around the aisles so that a clerk can curvey the entire store from one Young man's fancy...

VALENTINE BELLE — Bright skies and balmy weather this week heightened the appeal of Valentine's Day for the young and young in heart. Kathy Kage, the gal with the sunny smile for her boy friend, adds an air of spring to the local scene. A junior at Chapel Hill High, Kathy is the daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Gordon Kage and a nominee for the school's Sweetheart Queen — who'll be revealed Saturday night.
