

24 new books from UNC Press to hit the market this fall

The University Press will release 4 books to the market during the fall of 1961.

The majority of the new books are historical in nature, dealing with the Civil War and early released include publications on American history and culture.

Other topics of the books to be economics, race relations, political science, biography, a sociological-historical interpretation of the future of man, poetry, literary criticism, three releases in the Germanic Languages and Literatures Studies, and four books in the Romance Languages and Literature Studies.

Scots throughout the United States might glean a key to their ancestors through a book entitled, "The Highland Scots of North Carolina, 1732-1776," by Duane Meyer. This colonial Scottish Highlander clan was the largest of its time; it was located on the Cape Fear River.

Books on the Civil War include one entitled, "A Virginia Yankee David Hunter Strother," edited in the Civil War; The Diaries of by Cecil D. Eby Jr. This publication marks the first time the diaries of Strother (known to his contemporaries as "Porte Crayon") have been published. Strother was a well-known illustrator and writer and the highest paid contributor to "Harpers New Monthly Magazine."

Railroad and history enthusiasts will delight in a publication entitled, "Virginia Railroads in the Civil War," by Angus James Johnston II. The book is published for the Virginia Historical Society and will be out of Sept. 300.

Among the books published by the Press for the Institute of Early American History and Culture is "The Negro in the American Revolution," by Benjamin Quarles. Dr. Quarles is professor and head of the Department of History at Morgan State College in Maryland.

Also published for this Institute are "William Shirley; King's Governor of Massachusetts," by John A. Schutz, professor at Whittier College; "Daniel Morgan; Revolutionary Rifleman," by Don Higginbotham, professor at Louisiana State University, 1781-1788," a work by Jackson Turner Main, professor at State University; and "The Anti-San Jose State College, support-federalists; Critics of the Coning the belief that the Constitution was the work of the social elite.

Roderick Seidenberg, the author of "Posthistoric Man" has a new book entitled "Anatomy of the Future" in which he speculates on the character of tomorrow's man. According to Seidenberg, men of the future will be highly organized; the individual will disappear. The book is scheduled for publication in September.

"Columbia: A Contemporary Political Survey," is the title of one of the few up to date books on a South American neighbor. This third book, on a South American country by the author John D. Martz, gives a historical-political background of the country's past 30 years.

The 20th century's first extensive biography of Renaissance poet John Dryden is incorporated in a book entitled, "The Life of John Dryden," by Charles E. Ward, Duke University professor of English.

Guy B. Johnson, University of North Carolina professor in the Department of Sociology and Anthropology, is a contributor to a collection of essays on race relations during the fifties. Entitled "Race Relations: Problems and Theory," the collection includes numerous essays by noted sociologists. It is edited by Jitsuichi Masuoka and Preston Valien.

In favor of the subsidization of new industry by municipalities and private development organizations is author John E. Moes in his book, "Local Subsidies for Industry." D. Moes is an assistant professor of economics at the University of Virginia.

What about Woodrow Jones for governor?

By Cliff Blue
VACUUM . . . The death of Cloyd Philpott has left a vacuum in the North Carolina Democratic political life which will be hard to fill.

Philpott was way out front as a likely candidate for governor in 1964—as far out as Sanford was this time four years ago.

Philpott came as near being a person which all groups could rally around and support as any man in Tar Heel political life today. He was being supported by both liberals and conservatives as all groups held him in high regard and respect.

It is not likely than another strong contender will emerge before the 1964 primary who will attract the support of both the conservative and liberal elements in the state.

POSSIBILITIES . . . There are plenty of possibilities on the horizon who would like to carry the banner of the Democratic party in North Carolina in 1964. Woodrow Jones of Rutherford County is one of the possibilities. Woodrow Jones is an able man. He represented his county in the North Carolina House before being elected to Congress from the Eleventh District.

And then he served as State Democratic Party Chairman, succeeding John Larkins. However, Jones is regarded as a conservative and it is not likely that the liberal Democrats would let him get far without formidable opposition.

And it would be the same way with a liberal candidate. The conservative group would not let him get far without formidable opposition.

GOP . . . With Philpott as the leading candidate for governor on the Democratic ticket, it would not have been very encouraging for Charlie Jonas to have gotten into the race. Now, it could be more encouraging for the GOP congressman to set his sails towards the governor's mansion in Raleigh.

AGRICULTURE . . . Speaking at the first annual Chatham County Farmers Day in Pittsboro a few days ago, State Commissioner of Agriculture L. Y. Ballentine told the group that "the golden age of agriculture is in the future." We feel that "Stage" is right—that agriculture's "golden age" is in the future—but farming like other things has made tremendous progress in the past 20 years.

AUTO LIABILITY RATE . . . We are very much concerned about the increased automobile liability rate.

We have great confidence in Charlie Gold, State Insurance Commissioner. He would not grant a rate increase unless it were necessary.

The trouble is this: We are having too many automobile wrecks, and the insurance companies are having to pay too much to get the cars repaired. Insurance companies are not too popular with the public, and they are being gouged, and the public, the people with liability insurance policies are having to pay for the gouging.

CITE MRS. WHITEFIELD
Mrs. Jane Whitefield, Executive Secretary of the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchants Association, has been awarded the fundamentals certificate from the Institute for Organization Management held recently at the University here, under co-sponsorship of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce.
