

Orange Pealings

WHAT IS IT ABOUT CHAIRMANSHIP of Chapel Hill's observance of United Nations Day that causes qualified citizens of cosmopolitan Chapel Hill to quail? This year, as in the past, the Mayor is having difficulty finding somebody to accept this job, and quite a few have turned it down.

SIDELIGHTS FROM THE newly-released Orange County farm census summary (reported in news story on page two, this issue): There is only one (1) acre of Irish potatoes officially recorded as being grown for sale in all the thousands of acres of good earth in the Land of Orange. And this, incidentally, is one less acre than was grown in the previous year. One enlightening factor on this is, however, that the census includes farm tracts of a five-acre minimum size. Thus the spud crops of many gardens and smaller truck farms were officially uncounted.

MORE THAN 2,000 PANCAKE breakfasts were served by Eastgate merchants in their early morning shoppers welcoming promotion last Saturday. Fact is the chow line had to be cut off at 10:45 a.m. with the hungry free loaders still arriving.

MIKE HALL, CAROLINA student folk singer who's been a popular attraction at the Ranch House for the past year, recently won the nation-wide Goya Guitar Folk Singing Festival at Grosinger's Hotel in upstate New York. He was awarded a $400 Goya classical guitar and recorded a soon-to-be-released album with several other folk singers. Currently he's completing work at UNC where he's a fourth year student majoring in sculpturing.

'WELCOME BACK, BOYS!'—Impartially displaying the colors of each of the area's "big three" colleges, Jean Neville of Chapel Hill photogenically welcomes the boys back for the fall term. The blue-eyed blonde, confides she's a Carolina fan, but doesn't mind spreading good will to the other schools as the new year opens.
