

Gill's statement on holding taxes strikes strong blow for bond issue

BY CLIFF BLUE

EDWIN GILL . . . Edwin Gill's statement last week that the $61,665,000 Capital Improvements Bond Issues could be paid off without an increase in state taxes is a powerful lick in behalf of the bond issues.

Edwin Gill is regarded as a conservative and an authority on matters of finance and taxation so when he makes a statement of this nature the people take note.

TAXES . . . Speaking of taxes, we do not feel that there should be any need to increase state taxes in the foreseeable future, unless taxes are first reduced right much, which could happen.

We suspect that there will be some tax exemptions before there are any increases! In the 1930's we had the sales tax pretty much as it is today, but the General Assembly kept nibbling at it, and in 1940 J. Melville Broughton was elected on a platform to take the tax off the table, and off it went from groceries.

Governor Sanford himself has already come out in favor of doing away with the tax on the sale of newspapers, since the law does not cover sales made by carriers handling less than 1000, but imposes the tax on subscribers who buy from a carrier handling over 1000 papers.

SMALL VOTE . . . Most people are saying that the passage of the ten bond issues totalling $61,665,000 will stand a better chance of passage in a small vote rather than a big vote. Most people predict a small vote in comparison to the biennial general election vote. The general feeling is that in a small vote those interested in the passage of the issues will be doing most of the voting and many of those opposed will simply not take the time to go to the polls.

But the people should study the issues thoroughly and go out in mass and vote the way they deem best for the state.

HONEST REPORTING . . . Sam Ragan, Executive editor of the News and Observer, and Ashley Futrell, editor of the Washington Daily News in Beaufort County have taken sharp issue with Senator Ben Sumner and John I. Anderson of the Transylvania Times regarding Sumner's statement there was a need for honest reporting in covering the General Assembly. Ragan and Futrell have called for specific instances of dishonest reporting, or in other words, put up or shut up.

FROM GERMANY . . . Voit Gilmore, Director of U. S. Travel Service, in a letter to the writer while in Germany says: "Berlin's prosperity is so great that jobs are looking for people. Many German businessmen can afford to travel to the U.S.A. It's the job of the U. S. Travel Service to urge more to come and to bring their families along for a U. S. vacation. Our opportunity is enormous. Germans now are prosperous and they are born travellers."

e. e. cummings here tonight

e. e. cummings, one of America's most popular and controversial poets will appear at Memorial Hall, at 8 p. m. today to read from his works. The reading is sponsored by the English Club.

The visit of cummings, who was a member of the famous Paris "exiles" including Ernest Hemingway and Gertrude Stein, is a nearannual feature on the UNC campus, and consistently draws a packed house.

His first book, "The Enormous Room," a prose work describing his time spent in a World War I concentration camp, immediately placed him in the vanguard of American literary figures. His reputation has not diminished since that time.

His major books of poetry include: "Tulips and Chimneys," 1923; "Is 5," 1926; "Collected Poems," 1938; "50 Poems," 1940; "IXL," 1944; "Xaipe," 1950; and in 1954 his monumental "Poems 1923-1954" was published.

In 1931, "Eimi," a description of his pilgrimage through Russia, appeared. "i; six nonlectures," a book of lectures given at Harvard, was published.

cummings' early reputation was made as a painter. He has exhibited in leading museums in the nation.

'Intimate' has new manager

The Intimate Bookshop has a new sales manager, according to Paul Smith, president of the famous Chapel Hill hang-out.

Carl Apollonio, who has been sales manager for three years has joined the sales staff of the J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia publishers. His place has been taken by Wallace Kuralt.

Mr. Kuralt is a graduate of the University of North Carolina, and first worked at the Intimate when he was a sophomore here. For the past year he has been in charge of paper-backs.

In addition to his talents as a bookman, he is a master of the bull fiddle, and popular with jazz aficionados on the campus. Less well known hereabouts is his skill at skindiving, which earned him the nickname of "The Walrus" in skindiving circles on Cape Cod this summer.

TO HEAR WALTER ALLEN

Walter Allen, Jr., University professor of Latin, will be the speaker for the annual meeting of the Classical Section of the Virginia Education Association tomorrow in Richmond, Va. The subject of Dr. Allen's address is "Reading Cicero's Mail," a discussion of some of the problems in the study of the nearly 1000 letters that have come down to the present time as Cicero's correspondence, most of them by Cicero himself but a number by his correspondents.
