A TRUE BILL OF INDICTMENT for first degree murder was returned in Orange County Superior Court yesterday morning against "Lucky" Moore of Carrboro, charged with the Dec. 2 pistol slaying of Bill Ellis. Chapel Hill Police Detective Howard Pendergraph testified before the jurymen, who also received the signed statements of two eyewitnesses to the single-shot tragedy. It was not expected that the trial would be called this term of court, nor that Moore would be permitted any bond.

Greensboro St. Dan Stallings, who bought the tract on bid from the Town a year ago is putting up apartments on the property has designated the public thoroughfare for his development Todd St.

EVANGELIST BILLY GRAHAM will speak on the University campus early next spring, it was announced in The Daily Tar Heel yesterday. Graham last appeared before a UNC podium in 1951 when a packed house in Memorial Hall gave him a thunderous ovation.

A PRE-DAWN BLAZE OF UNKNOWN origin last Friday morning destroyed the historic old home place of Rosa Wilson in the St. Mary's community. It is said that the main part of the home was built in 1753 and was an "ordinary" operated by Michael Synnott at his dwelling house, a landmark located on a well-traversed trading path of the colonial era.

A MOTORIST'S NOSTALGIA was revived Monday night when the Chapel Hill Town aldermen passed an ordinance prohibiting U-turns in the downtown area of Franklin and Rosemary Streets. —How many not-so-old timers there recalled the time of a few years ago when the stoplight on the cement pylon in the center of the Franklin-Columbia St. corner was the axis for permitted U-turns by all motorists. And at the other end of the one-block track, in front of the postoffice—where there was no stoplight at all—all drivers pulled over to the right curb and slowed down to swing out for a U-turn back up the street.
