A BELFRY, BUT NO BELL IS in the freshly-erected steeple of the new Chapel Hill Presbyterian Church. The bell will cost $2,500—a purchase not immediately contemplated by the congregation in light of the more than $900,000 investment in the total church plant without this. As hundreds craned their necks to watch erection of the 45-foot spire on the steeple yesterday afternoon the usual jokes about taking up a collection went the rounds. . . . And despite dire warnings from the sideline experts all went quite well on the job.

ANENT THE STEEPLE ERECTION, too, Presbyterian Church pastor the Rev. Vance Barron assures Methodist brethren at the outset that his flock does not intend to challenge them in steeple height. The peak of the 139-foot spire, it is readily granted, is about 30 feet lower than the taper atop the nearby Methodist Church. No particular concern was given the steeple height, he explained. It was simply constructed according to the recommendations of the architect in Philadelphia.

ONE OF THOSE ACCIDENTAL athletic rarities—a hole-in-one—scored by Chapel Hill veterinarian Dr. Lou Vine on the third hole at Chapel Hill Country Club last Sunday. Dr. and Mrs. Vine were in a Scotch foursome with Mr. and Mrs. Bill Esau when he teed off with a seven iron and placed his ball neatly in the cup 150 yards away.

ASK ANYBODY WHO'S HAD past experience with such and he'll likely shake his head when you ask about the county zoning proposal. Opposition to the measure outside of Hillsboro is vigorous, even while the County Planning Board is in the process of revising and moderating the comprehensive land use plan on the basis of suggestions and complaints aired in hearings to date.

PARLIAMENTARY PROCEDURE problems beset Chapel Hill School Board Chairman Dr. J. Kempton Jones during a business discussion in the Board meeting Monday night. Dr. Jones, who voluntarily does not vote on Board business except to break tie votes, received a motion made by Dr. Fred Ellis. Hearing no second to the proposal—which he viewed favorably—he proposed to second it himself. Robert's Rules were called into force, and it was pointed out that to legally make his second the chairman would have to vacate the chair—and to Dr. Ellis, who is vice-chairman. —The point having been made and agreed upon as proper procedure, the second was forthwith accepted — though the motion failed to carry.

Spire sired...

FREE SHOW—Over 1,000 persons looked on as sidewalk superintendents during the free show provided yesterday afternoon by the construction crew that placed the 45-foot spire atop the steeple of the new Chapel Hill Presbyterian Church. From ground level to the tip of the gold-plated cast aluminum cross is 139 feet. The delicate two-hour operation went off without a hitch.
