Owners of old homes asked for information

Questionnaires were mailed recently by the Historical Society to 30 owners of 18th and 19th century private dwelling houses in Hillsboro as a part of the Society's recently announced Survey of Historic Sites and Buildings.

House owners were asked to prepare records of their houses, to identify builders, to pinpoint the time when the house was built, to offer an architectural history of the house, to make floor plans and garden plans, and to prepare detailed descriptions of mantels, panelling, doors, etc. The Society also asked for pictures of each house as well as for information about summer kitchens, summer houses, well houses and various secondary structures.

Society members stand ready to assist house owners with any portion of the questionnaire, particularly that relating to the early history of the houses. The Society asked for at least one section of the three-page questionnaire to be completed by July 15.
