Orange Peelings

HILLSBORO AND CHAPEL Hill "Wildcats" after beating one another around last Friday take on Durham County foes tomorrow night in Home Games. Hillsboro meets Northern Durham at Orange Speedway and Chapel Hill plays Southern Durham at Carrboro Lions Park.

OVER IN RALEIGH STATE and local authorities are following with great interest a matter that could eventually have an effect in Chapel Hill. At the request of city officials a survey is being made by the state of its holdings there to determine a value on its automatically tax-exempt property. Raleigh has for some time been discussing the matter of some payment in lieu of taxes by the state, since it provides traditional municipal services free of charge, just as Chapel Hill does for the University. —It was even casually suggested, though not seriously, that Raleigh de-annex the state buildings in the uptown district. Then they'd at least qualify for out-of-town double water rates!

CHAPEL HILL POLICE HAVE had a previous acquaintance with phosphorous, prior to the mysterious blaze discovered near the campus last Saturday night. Phosphorous was suspected as an incendiary agent at one point in the investigations of the fires set several years ago in several UNC buildings by confessed arsonist Richard Satterwhite. And last year burning phosphorous caused a blaze of minor proportions in a chemical storeroom of the UNC pharmacy building.

JIM LALANNE OF CHAPEL Hill is one of the Tar Heel trade boosters on the current mission to Europe. The group left last weekend via air for London. After a brief stopover they split into small groups to barnstorm the continent. He'll be back in about four weeks.

INSOFAR AS COULD BE DETERMINED through regular sources here yesterday no Air Force reservists from Chapel Hill have More PEALINGS on Page 12

Halloween Artistry...

Chapel Hill youngsters — and their parents — were out in force last night, despite weather that was somewhat raw, to celebrate that spookiest of all nights, Halloween. The Jaycees Carnival at Eastgate went off as usual with plenty of customers for the spook house and other events. Window painting, as depicted here by pipe-smoking Becky Beeston, had its adherents, too, leaving more work for the janitors this morning.
