

AN EDITORIAL . . .

Chapel Hill is given urgently-needed time; how will it use it?

As a result of sincere gestures of good faith by all parties directly concerned Chapel Hill now has an opportunity to resolve its problems of human relations in a mature and exemplary manner.

The atmosphere of threats and confrontation has for the moment been removed. The entire community has been asked, quite appropriately, to move into the arena that was formerly occupied only by adversaries, and to make an opportunity of a problem.

Chapel Hill needed time, and it now has it. But the real crisis, and the proof of Chapel Hill's good will, will be shown in what it does with this time. The injustices that have existed, the bad feelings that have

(Continued on Page 2)

Compromises bring truce in racial strife

—See story on Page 2

Merchants planning big Fall Festival, Appreciation Day

—Story on Page 7

Orange Pealings

MISS NORTH CAROLINA, while on the UNC campus yesterday, said she recalled Orange County's beauty queen, Ann Clayton, quite well, since both were high school cheerleaders, and met occasionally at athletic contests. Jeanne Swanner also remembered when she played on the championship Graham High girls basketball team, which won 18 out of 19 games — losing only to Hillsboro in a double overtime.

MRS. OTELIA CONNOR, Chapel Hill's gift to the world of Emily Post, is flying to Cleveland, Ohio, today to appear on a regional TV show there tomorrow. The producers, reading the piece in Time last week about her effort to teach manners to Carolina students, invited her to speak in a like vein to their television audience.

DAMAGE FROM THE TWO and one-half inch rainstorm yesterday was reported to be quite mild, according to municipal and University officials. Biggest trouble, Town Manager Bob Peck notes, is caused by people piling natural debris to be picked up by the Town in gutters and ditches. When the rains come these cause serious overflow.

WORST CLOGGING OF drainage in Chapel Hill in many years was in the 24-inch culvert under the W. Franklin St. bottom at Mallette St. Public Works Superintendent Shelton Womble recently probed the murky depths to find out why the stoppage; discovered a 20-gallon barrel jammed sideways in the pipe, backing up other litter.

THE BILL FRIDAYS, President and Mrs. only, fled the realm of gag laws, budget worries, and administrative problems on Monday of this week. Replete with TV set, fishing gear, and charcoal grill in their station wagon, they headed for two weeks of well-deserved

(More Pealings, Page 12)

The News of orange county

—Chapel Hill, Hillsboro, Carrboro—Between and Beyond—

VOL. 71, NO. 30

HILLSBORO AND CHAPEL HILL, N. C., THURSDAY, JULY 25, 1963

24 PAGES

Miss N. C. comes to the Hill . . .

TAR HEEL BEAUTY ON CAMPUS — Miss North Carolina, Jeanne Swanner of Graham, visited the University campus in Chapel Hill yesterday to talk to recruiters for the Peace Corps. A rising junior at Auburn University, she is majoring in English and physical education and is interested in joining the Peace Corps two years hence, with the idea of working in a recreation program. The tall, honey-blond beauty is seen above in the "Y" court, with Wilson Library in the background.

Circulation Today

7,651

99 PCT. DISTRIBUTED IN ORANGE COUNTY