TURNER FORREST SUFFERED another break-in at his farm machinery dealership in Effland last weekend. On Saturday morning employees arriving at work found that the giant 6,800-pound office safe had been entered and an estimated $7,800 in cash stolen. The yeggmen used an acetylene torch found in Forrest's repair shop to cut into the heavy metal and get the door open.

DEFENDANTS IN THE CIVIL rights trials in Hillsborough last week put in a good deal of their time waiting on the courthouse steps and old courthouse lawn for their cases to be called. With modest ingenuity some of 'em apparently secured a "Lake for Governor" bumper sticker, altered it to read "Leak for Governor," and affixed it to a sidewalk trash can. Pete Leak, former N.C.C. student from Pittsboro, was one of the defendants.

A CAROLINA STUDENT, LARRY Cheek, was fined $50 and costs for violating the state law against littering the highways, to which he pleaded not guilty in Chapel Hill Recorder's Court Tuesday. He was arrested late Friday afternoon for allegedly throwing a glass out of a car as it passed pickets walking in front of Brady's on Durham Rd. The picketers testified to this effect in court, one declaring the glass shattered at his feet.

ABOUT 1,300 PERSONS ATTENDED the talk given in Memorial Hall Monday night by former Mississippi Gov. Ross Barnett. About 250 came to hear N. C. State Prof. Allard K. Lowenstein rebut Barnett's remark the next night in an "equal time" sort of talk also sponsored by the Carolina Forum. Lowenstein, who led a Negro voter registration project in Mississippi last summer, had a brief impromptu debate with Barnett at the public reception for the latter following his Monday night talk. In the line of further speeches at UNC by well-known public figures this year, the Forum has tentatively scheduled a talk by NBC commentator Richard Harkness here on May 17.
