HARD ON THE HEELS OF ground breaking for a 500-coed commercial dormitory in Chapel Hill, another major developer has been in town during recent days conducting a survey as to the need and possibility of putting up a similar structure himself — a several million dollar venture, reportedly. This might combine off-campus dormitory housing in single rooms and efficiency apartments. Current thinking is that it's oriented to the medical center area.

RELIABLE RUMOR HAS IT that the downtown motor hotel for Chapel Hill, imminence of which has been revived by installation of the crane with the big long boom — will be built and ready for occupancy by overnight guests by early next fall. The deal is almost closed for leasing it to a major national lodging organization, this word has it.

SETTING ASIDE OF SEVERAL parking slots on both East and West Franklin Streets in downtown Chapel Hill for motorcycles and motor scooters would ease curb-side parking conditions somewhat, police suggest. It is not infrequent that a motorist will pull in and almost hit one of the two-wheelers before he sees it legally parked in a big car parking space. Another problem: Two or more cycles are parked in a metered spot, and the meter time has run out. Which set of wheels do you give the one-dollar ticket? The proposed parking spaces for these smaller vehicles would accommodate about four each in less than a regular car parking space.

PETTY NIGHT-TIME BREAK-INS at filling stations and other places of business have plagued police in Chapel Hill and Carrboro in the last couple of weeks. On Monday night the Beauty-Rama and Edwards Beauty Shop were both ransacked. Police have been questioning several youths in connection with the crimes.

An earlier scheduling of the fund-raising project for aid to the blind three weeks ago was rained out.

Ballot box is upstaged . . .

MARK GOES SIGHTSEEING — For his parents, Prof. and Mrs. Jack Adams of Chapel Hill, the trip to the Northside Precinct polling place in Chapel Hill on Tuesday meant casting their ballots in the general election. But for two-year-old Mark David Adams the excursion meant seeing the Town's big fire trucks, since the polling place is in the Central Fire Station. Above, the future constituent ogles the fire truck while his father casts a ballot under the watchful eye of Precinct Judge T. Thayer Eloyd.
