That Awful Gun.

Some weeks ago, uncle Tip came down from Bowden's Crater and traded Mr. Len Gatewood out of his old winchester. Len told him how he shot a ball through a telephone pole and it glanced on the pavement and went on through a brick wall and struck the stair case and passed on out behind the house and lodged in a cherry tree. Uncle Tip bought it on the spot. The people along Glide-well's Hollow have grown so alarmed over the advent of such a dangerous gun that they are asking the Earl of Dennis to have the Legislature convened in extra session in order to have a law passed against the shooting of this gun any where in Forsyth or adjoining counties. The people of Stokes county are also excited about this dangerous gun, and something will have to be done and done at once.

Died of Diphtheria.

About eight o'clock on Tuesday morning Miss Pearl Walker, aged about 13 years, living near Daisy, this county, died of diphtheria, and was buried at Mt. Pleasant on Wednesday afternoon. It appears that Pearl had been suffering from what was supposed to be tonsillitis, but after death a physician pronounced the ailment to have been diphtheria.

Who Killed Kobre?

Sunday night, January 21st, Henry Kobre was killed in his room over a bar room in this city. No one appeared to know at that time or for weeks afterward, who did the fatal work. Rewards amounting to $1,600 were offered for the person or persons who committed the crime.

On Monday night of this week, Sam Kobre, a half brother of the murdered man, and William Plean, both Hebrews, were arrested charged with the fatal assault.

On Wednesday a preliminary hearing was given the prisoners before Mayor Eaton, at which Solicitor Graves was present. One Sallie Stewart, a seventeen year old white girl was placed upon the stand, it having been claimed that she knew a thing or two, and that her knowledge had led to the arrests. Sallie broke down and failed to say much, but the prisoners were bound over to court without bail, and the woman was sent back to prison on some other minor charge and as a witness.

Whether these men killed Kobre, or whether their being held is largely a matter of perhaps, the courts and further testimony may determine.

It is claimed that another man named Whitbeck figured in the murder, but he is not to be found.

Something dark and mysterious about this brutal tragedy.

Death From Pistol Shot.

Harry Campbell, white and a stone cutter, aged 38, and a married man, came to Winston on Tuesday afternoon from Mt. Airy, N. C., accompanied by a young woman named Emma McMillen. They went to a room over the revenue office on Main street. A pistol shot, followed by a woman's scream, brought the janitor, who snatched the pistol from Campbell's hands. Campbell was bleeding from a wound in the head. He was sent to the hospital, where he died two hours later. The woman was held at police headquarters. Campbell had over $400 on his person, the woman said, but no one appears to know what went with it. The woman did not get it. It developed that Campbell was flourishing his pistol when it discharged, the bullet penetrating his brain. The woman was released on Wednesday and left on the first out for Mt. Airy.

Some time ago we announced that it had just been discovered that the inventor of the circular saw was a native of North Carolina. We can now gladly state that the inventor of the Colt revolver, which is a direct descendant of the horse pistol, was also a North Carolinian. We believe that the inventor of the grindstone was a North Carolinian, but there is one or two missing links in the chain of evidence. —Raleigh Enterprise.
