Sequel to the Measles

By HARRIET G. CANTFIELD

Copyright, 1904, by M. Wood

Kitty stood at Miss Tremont's door, smiling broadly. "Here's a note, ma'am," she said, holding out a piece of newspaper scribbled along the margin. "The little feller on the second floor said I should give it to you. He's just gettin' over the measles an' awful lonesome. It's written on the bias like, ma'am."

"Poor little man!" Miss Tremont said sympathetically. "I don't seem to remember him, Kitty."

"No'm; they just moved in this week, an' they're kept quiet like—there's no one but the little feller an' his uncle. He paints women's heads—mostly red-headed ones—in their back parlor, but he's out today, an' I'm getting paid for lookin' out for Jimmie—that's his name, ma'am."

Miss Tremont read the note and smiled. "Tell him I'll be there soon, Kitty," she said.

Jimmie's note was short and phonetically spelled. "Dear Miss Tremont," it said, "I wish you wood plect come down and see me. My eyes are week, and Kitty only noes 'bout Cingderella. So no more from your young friend, Jimmie B."

When Miss Tremont knocked at her little neighbor's door an eager, boyish voice called out, "Come right in!" Jimmie was sitting up in bed, supported by many pillows. He was very thin and weak—"all eyes and beak, like a young robin," Kitty said.

"Shake!" he said, holding out a thin little hand. "I can't give 'em to you now—the measles, I mean. It's first class of you to come. Kitty thought you would. Sit down, won't you? It's pretty dark in here—count of my eyes—but I can see you're awful pretty."

Miss Tremont laughed and drew a chair close to the bed. "Thank you," she said brightly. "Did Kitty suggest that you send for me?"

"No. But it's too dark in here to read, an' Kitty just knew one story, an' after I'd heard that three times white lids curtained her little eyes. "Uncle Hal, did you say?" she asked softly. "Once upon a time," she continued, to the delight of Jimmie, who thought the words prefaced another story, "I had a friend—an artist—whose name was Hal."

"Haven't you got him yet?" Jimmie asked.

"No. I sent him away—I didn't know how dear he was to me—I wouldn't do it now, Jimmie—and he was—"

"Eaten by cannibals?" Jimmie interrupted in an awe-struck voice.

Miss Tremont smiled and looked up. A tall young man, with fine eyes, was standing in the doorway, looking at them.

"Uncle Hal!" Jimmie cried. "Uncle Hal, here's Miss Tremont. She came in to—" But, to Jimmie's surprise, Uncle Hal had crossed the room and was holding Miss Tremont's hands in his.

"Kate," he said. "Kate, dear, will you forgive me for listening to what you said to Jimmie? Your words have made me very happy, dear."

Jimmie wondered what it was that had pleased Uncle Hal so much—the bears or the Indians or the cannibals. "I'll bet it was the cannibal story," he said to himself. "She's a Jim Dandy at 'em!"

"Will you forgive me for listening?" Uncle Hal said again.

"Why not?" Miss Tremont asked softly—so softly that Jimmie barely heard her. "It was true, Hal."

Jimmie's eyes opened wide. "Cannibals and all?" he said. But Miss Tremont didn't hear him. Uncle Hal was talking to her again. He coughed once or twice, but they didn't notice him. "You'll have to speak a little louder," he said at last, "if you want me to hear."

Miss Tremont's face grew very pink, and Uncle Hal laughed aloud.

"Never mind, Jimmie boy," he said. "I've been persuading Miss Tremont to adopt you—you'll like that, old fellow?"

"Like it?" Jimmie shouted for joy. Then a sudden doubt assailed him. "Would you mind taking Uncle Hal, too, Miss Tremont?" he said anxiously. "We belong together."

Miss Tremont's laughing eyes met the artist's for a moment. "I understood," she said demurely, "that he was to be thrown in."

Tammany Shouts for Parker.

New York, August 4.—Tammany Hall ratified the nomination of Parker and Davis to-night. The first mention of Parker's name brought forth boisterous cheers from the audience. The name of Davis was also applauded. The resolution was presented by former State Senator Thomas C. O'Sullivan, and were adopted. They endorse the national platform; declare that present depression is due to the President's absolute disregard of constitutional limitations; call the President the "Man of Horseback;" denounce protection; oppose monopoly; declare for the independence of the Filipinos, and denounce sectionalism.

Bananas, Boa Constrictor, Girl.

Hazleton, Pa., August 4.—While Miss Nellie J. Steward, a clerk in a store here, was handling a bunch of bananas, she was greatly startled by a snake darting out from the fruit at her. Her screams brought aid and the snake was captured and placed in a jar. It proved to be a very young boa constrictor.

A Perfect Painless Pill

Is the one that will cleanse the system, set the liver to action, remove the bile, clear the complexion, cure headache and leave a good taste in the mouth. The famous little pills for doing such work pleasantly and effectually are DeWitt's Little Early Risers. Bob Moore, at Lafayette, Ind., says: "All other pills I have used grip and sicken, while DeWitt's Little Early Risers are simply perfect." Sold by The Gibson Drug Store.

A TALL YOUNG MAN WAS STANDING IN THE DOORWAY.

she said maybe Miss Tremont could tell me some. An' I asked her would she go for you. You can tell me anything you want to. I'm specially interested in bears an' Indians an' cannibals."

Miss Tremont laughed again and leaned back in the easy chair in pleasant anticipation. She had frequently told stories to an appreciative audience in her sister's nursery, when eager little faces sought hers in breathless expectation and eager little voices pleaded for "just one more, please—'bout Indians!"

It was a pleasure to bear this weary little soul away on the wings of her imagination—away from the second floor bedroom and the measles. Together they roamed the plains with the red men, climbed trees with the black bears and were cast away on cannibal islands, where only living skeletons were safe.

Neither Miss Tremont nor her delighted little hearer was conscious of the passage of time. "And the little cub climbed a persimmon tree and escaped from the hunter," she was saying when the clock struck.

"Was it 4 or 5?" she said. Jimmie sighed and came back to everyday life and the measles. "I don't know," he said. "You can look an' see, if you'd like it."

Miss Tremont went into the back parlor, and presently Jimmie heard a startled exclamation.

"Is it so late?" he called. She came back and stood by his bed. "I—I didn't look at the clock," she stammered. "There was a picture on the easel—the paint was fresh—it was a picture of—who painted it, Jimmie?"

"Uncle Hal, I suppose," he said laughingly. Pictures were not as interesting as cannibals. But Miss Tremont seemed to think that they were. "It's a woman's picture, isn't it?" he said politely. "Uncle Hal said he was working on a stunner. He didn't just call it a stunner, but it meant the same—his 'masterpiece.' I believe he said. Has she got red hair? Not bright red, but a dark brownish kind, like yours? Most all Uncle Hal's pictures have red hair. Kitty says she guesses red paint comes cheaper. Uncle Hal calls it 'auburn.'" Miss Tremont's face flushed and the
