RUSSIA MAY KNOW MORE THAN ADMITTED

Suspicion is Felt That Russia Knew More of the North Sea Affair Than She Admits.

Unrevealed Message from St. Petersburg May be the Reported Apology—Three English Fleets Ready for Sailing Orders.

England's Navy Can Find Admiral Rodjestvensky if Russia Cannot.

London, Oct. 26.—It is learned that the Russian Embassy at London received an urgent telegram from St. Petersburg Sunday several hours before the news of the North sea tragedy reached Hull. This message recalled Count Benckendorff, the Russian Ambassador, who rushed from London without baggage. This fact leads to the suspicion that Russia heard more than she will admit and is purposely keeping Admiral Rodjestvensky out of reach. This belief resulted in more irritable feeling in cabinet circles today and these suspicions lead to the intimation that word will be sent to Russia that if she cannot find the Admiral the British navy can.

Overhauling British Cruisers.

Chatham, England, Oct. 26.—A double gang of workmen are hurriedly overhauling the first class cruisers Berwick and Kents so as to make them able to join in the cruiser squadron by Saturday.

Made Unqualified Apologies.

London, Oct. 26.—The Dalziel's Paris correspondent reports that Russia has made unqualified apology to Great Britain.

Ready for Sailing Orders.

Gibraltar, Oct. 26.—The British Channel fleet has completed all preparations and is now ready to sail on orders.

Message Not Given Out.

London, Oct. 26.—Lord Lansdown, Foreign Secretary, is in receipt of a long Russian dispatch, the contents of which has not been revealed. The three fleets which have been ordered by the Admiralty to be in readiness as a precautionary measure, will in all probability make rendezvous west of Gibraltar near Trafalgar. The three fleets which comprise a hundred vessels are divided as follows: Twenty-eight battleships, 18 cruisers, 54 torpedo boat destroyers.

Russia Would Wait and Hear From Rodjestvensky.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 26.—The Admiralty asserts that no word has yet been received from Admiral Rodjestvensky in explanation of the North sea tragedy, though urgent messages have been sent him at various points where he is expected to touch. Officials insist that it is impossible to take definite action until the Admiral is heard from, though Great Britain is impatient for an answer to her demands.

Baltic Fleet Sighted.

Vigo, Spain, Oct. 26.—The Russian Baltic fleet arrived off here today.

Coming to Settlement.

London, Oct. 26.—The Anglo-Russian crisis, resulting from firing on the British fishing vessels in the North Sea, is apparently approaching a settlement. Lansdown was this morning in receipt of a long message from Russia and while the contents have not been made public it is hinted in official circles that Russia has made preliminary apology for the occurrence and strongly intimated that all the British demands would be met.

Armies are Close to Each Other and are Fortifying Lines.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 26.—An official dispatch from Mukden dated Oct. 25th states that the armies are within touch and busily fortifying positions. The Japanese shell the Russian positions occasionally, especially towards sunset when they are able to see the Russian lines more distinctly.

Russians Suffer Two Minor Repulses.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 26.—General Kuropatkin reports that there was no general engagement yesterday. He also reports that the Russians suffered two minor repulses.

GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER.

Walter Hough for the Killing of George Hartsell on Verdict of Manslaughter is Sentenced to Twelve Months in Jail—Appearance Bond Given.

The trial of Walter Hough, which was begun yesterday, came to a conclusion this morning, the verdict being manslaughter. The jury was out but a short while, having been charged by Judge Allen that on the evidence of the defendant it was clearly a case of manslaughter. No argument was made in the case and when the verdict was recorded a motion for a new trial was made and overruled. Following this Judge Allen examined Mrs. Hartsell as to the statement made by her husband and sentenced Hough to twelve months in jail—the term for manslaughter begins at four months in jail and runs up to thirty years. The appeal bond was fixed at $300 and this was given. There was quite a good deal of interest in the case, in which much sympathy was shown for Hough. The point on which the case goes to the Supreme court is one which would take into consideration the size and strength of the two men. It is a point which has not been passed on and Judge Allen expressed a desire to see it settled by the higher court.

The criminal docket was finished with the Hough case, with the exception of that against J. B. Ivey & Co., which was not prossed.

The grand jury has finished its work and been discharged.

On the civil docket the first case that of Gowan Dusenbery vs. city was continued; Morris vs. Knox & Brown comes up for a hearing and is being heard this evening.

STILL UNDER MARTIAL LAW.

Parties Severely Dealt With for Carrying Concealed Weapons.

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 26.—Martial law still continues today in Berkley, where the negro Blunt, politician and leader was taken from jail and lynched by masked men. Many negroes were arrested by the military and found to have pistols, knives and razors and were severely dealt with by Major Allen under the Virginia concealed weapon laws. The whites fear an outbreak by the blacks when the military is withdrawn.

HARRIS AND WHITNER.

Republicans Candidates Spoke on the Issues in the Campaign.

Messrs. C. J. Harris and A. A. Whitner, Republican orators were heard at the court house last night. Mr. Harris, the candidate for Governor, spoke first, though very briefly. Mr. Harris stated that he was no speaker, and there was no mistaking the fact, for the man is just what he claims and cannot make a speech. He talked for less than half hour as he said to give briefly some of the reasons why Republicanism was needed in the state as well as in the nation. Only once did he refer to state affairs and that was to touch on the subjects of schools and business management, referring to the A. & N. C. road he said that a business management would have made a satisfactory settlement long ago. He argued that the business men wanted a trial at the affairs of the state, and while he doubted his own election he said that big gains would be made and soon the state would fall into the Republican column. Mr. Harris gives evidence of being just what we have all heard, a business man, of splendid appearance and nice manners. Following Mr. Harris, Mr. Whitner spoke and for two hours he preached Republicanism. From the view point of a Republican Mr. Whitner made a good speech. He took up the tariff at length, he spoke of the money question, the Philippines and the trusts, declaring that Roosevelt was the only president who had used the law against these combines. Mr. Whitner replied to much of the speech of Senator Simmons and then went into the state affairs, discussing as a Republicans these things. The larger part of Mr. Whitner's speech was a creditable one, and from the side of the argument from which he approached, was well handled.

Whipple had the section of country terror-stricken for three weeks, during this time he shot Samuel B. Starmer and State Policeman Louks. His daughter Elizabeth and another child, since the death of Whipple's wife six months ago, have been living at Theodore Evans', in Glastonbury. On Oct. 7 Elizabeth told Mrs. Evans fearfully that her father had hidden in the barn. The barn was surrounded. When Whipple found that he was caught he shot himself in the head. He died in the Hartford Hospital. He refused to say goodbye to Elizabeth. He knew she had betrayed him.
