SUPPORTING DISABLED MINISTERS.

The church does not always do her full duty in a very work coming to her hand, and one place where there has been neglect is in the full caring for her aged and disabled ministers and their families. Realizing that all has not been done that should be in this respect there is now being brought before the church people this great and urgent need for contribution. If there is any cause that should appeal to a good man, it is this one. For the men who devote their entire life to the ministry have full right to claim support, not only in their active days, but in the ebb tide of life as well. The Presbyterian church is now making an earnest effort to raise an endowment for the support of its disabled ministers and their dependent ones. Not only so with this particular church, but others are urging the claim of this class of men with earnestness. We feel that anything we might say in this respect is in order, for the cause appeals to us with more force and we feel that a part of our mission in life is to seek to bring people to a full realization of their duty in regard to such matters as this.

FARMERS' PICNIC.

It is time to begin to arrange for a mid-summer farmers' picnic. We say this assuming that it is the desire of the farmers of Cabarrus to hold a picnic at some central point as they have done in past years, and should this be true, the Tribune hopes to be of some aid in bringing about such a meeting. We suggest that such a picnic be planned and carried out and that some one or more speakers of prominence be invited to make talks. Mr. Clarence Poe, of the Progressive Farmer could no doubt be had, and we should like very much to have Mr. Poe come to Cabarrus and visit our people.

INSANE MAN A SUICIDE.

David Hutchins Escapes from Morganton Hospital and is Found Hanging to a Tree.

An Observer special from Morganton of the 5th says:
"The lifeless body of David C. Hutchins, of Yadkin county, an inmate of the State Hospital for the Insane here, was yesterday found dangling from the end of a rope one mile below Drexel in a very secluded spot in the woods near the railroad track. The coroner was notified and an inquest was held and the verdict was death by his own hand.

Hutchins was about 48 years old and had been an inmate of the Hospital for about two years. He escaped from the Hospital June 25 and as soon as it was found out that he was gone, Dr. McCampbell sent two attendants to search for him. After a long search the two men returned unable to find him. Telegraph and telephone communications brought no results as to his whereabouts, and his concealment was a mystery until the ghastly find yesterday.

Atlanta Girl Saved Man from Waves — and Then.

Atlanta Journal.
Miss Bessie Adamse, a strikingly beautiful young woman who formerly lived in Atlanta, was the heroine of a singular adventure that began in high tragedy and ended in broad comedy at Atlantic City late Friday afternoon.

Amid the cheers of excited thousands, this handsomely gowned Georgia girl plunged into the waves to rescue a man whom another had brutally thrust downward and who was sinking for the third time. A brave act, indeed, but what followed makes the pith and climax of the story, as told in dispatches just received from the fashionable watering place.

Until a few weeks ago, Miss Adams was at the New Kimball hotel, where for two years or more she conducted a manieuring parlor. On falling heir to a substantial fortune she set forth to travel, going first to visit friends in Washington, D. C. Thence she ran up for a stay at the famous beach where matters fell out so strangely.

In company with a friend she was promenading along the broad walk, dressed in that charming taste so well remembered by her Atlanta friends. In all that moving gallery of pretty faces none was more observed than hers with its frame of rich golden hair and its eyes of wonderful blue.

Little wonder therefore that the broad-walkers surged forward breathlessly when they caught sight of her leaping from the pier and swimming boldly forth to a spot where two men were fiercely struggling in the water. The whole thing had happened in a blink. Far out across the surf a cry of terror had rung. Two stately swimmers were grappling as though in a death fight, their fists clenched about each others' throats. Suddenly one of them relaxed his grasp under the torture of the other's iron strength. Then began sinking slowly while his victor beat him savagely from far above. For a moment the spectators on the beach, Miss Adams among them, sickened at the sight. Then one of the women fell back in a faint shrieking, "Murder!" as she sank unconscious. Others took up the fearful cry but none moved, they were so horrified; none but Miss Adams.

Headless of her clothes, she dashed off her picture hat, flung a hurried, half scornful glance about her and sprang into the tide. On she swam with strokes of wonderful grace and strength, buffeting the waves as if they had been playthings. On near the bar, the grasping man went down for the third time. The crowd sent up a deafening cheer.

And then as the rescuer reached the spot where the fated one had disappeared and dived and brought him up again, a roar of laughter broke from the assailant's mouth. At the same time a rasping voice was heard calling from behind one of the bath houses, "Hey, there, what are you doing? Cut that out, young lady, you are spoiling the picture."

"The picture? What does that mean?" asked the bewildered, high-strung throng on the walk.

Then a business-looking photographer came walking briskly up, just as Miss Adams reached the beach again, followed by the two men who had suddenly to all appearance become god friends.

"Sure, the picture," said the man with the camera, a tone of mingled humor and disappointment in his voice. "We came down here to get scenes for a motion picture melodrama we're planning to put on now—"

Miss Adams broke into the speech with a low cry, as she foresaw what the possibilities of the case might be.

"You are not going to see that picture?" she said indignantly.

"Well," answered the photographer, "we weren't responsible for you getting in it, Miss."

And so it happens, for all anybody knows, that the Atlanta girl's pretty face may be flashed all over the continent.

The Superior Young Man.

Charlotte Chronicle.
People of an observant turn of mind will agree with the Chronicle that the morals of the present generation of young men are of a higher standard than were the morals of the young men of a generation ago. Especially is this true in regard to sobriety. The young man of today realizes the fact that drinking and business do not go together and that on the day he takes to drink he throws away all chance of success in life. Sobriety is an exaction of the business world today. The drinking young man is suited to no business whatever, and no decent employment is open to him. The change in business conditions in the past twenty-five years has put the young man to the front. In all business circles—mercantile, banking, manufacturing—the young man is a leading factor. In these times the young man gives employment to young men and a premium is placed on good morals, healthy bodies, healthy minds and habits of sobriety. These cannot obtain with the young man addicted to drink, and it is these wholesome requirements that probably are in a great measure responsible to the all-around superiority of the young man of this age over the young man of 25 years ago.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreadful disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.
