Weekly Report From The General Assembly In Raleigh

Bowman Gray Stadium Race News

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C. — Curtis Turner, one of the most famous stock car race drivers in the nation, will deal himself in on the duel between Glenn Wood and Carl Burris at Bowman Gray Stadium Saturday night.

Turner, who dominated racing at the stadium in the early 1950s, will probably drive a modified Ford set up by Morton Fralin of Rocky Mount, Va. It will be his first appearance on the weekly race program in several years. Turner, now president of Charlotte Motor Speedway, has concentrated on late model stock car racing in recent years.

Race Directors Bill France and Alvin Hawkins have scheduled a six-event program this week, plus a "Demolition Derby" — a wrecking contest in which drivers compete with old cars and the last one able to run is declared the winner.

The race schedule will consist of two 10-lap heats and a 40-lap feature for modified and sportsman cars, and two 10-lap heats and a 20-lap main event for hobby drivers. The first race will begin at 8:30 p.m.

Turner and wood will be in for a busy day Saturday. Turner is scheduled to drive Wood's 1961 Ford in the Rebel 300 late model convertible race at Darlington, S. C., Saturday afternoon.

The racing partners then plan to hop in Turner's airplane and fly to Winston-Salem to compete against each other. Wood will drive the "back seat driver" modified Ford which has carried him to three stadium triumphs this season.

Wood's latest Stadium victory was a result of tough luck for rival Burris, who edged Wood in a tense race the previous week. Burris led the first 34 laps of last Saturday's 40-lap modified-sportsman feature race.

On the 34th circuit Burris ran up behind a slower car driven by Glenn Magee of Lexington. When Burris hit his brakes, he was in turn bumped from behind by Wood who had been trailing the leader by one to four feet most of the way.

Burris' car climbed up on the trunk of Magee's vehicle and both spun out. Burris recovered and came in third behind Wood and Eb Clifton of Rural Hall.

Court reform (some prefer to call it "court improvement") - the thorn in the legislative flesh for the past two sessions - was finally solved to some extent this week. Like all good legislation, the bill which passed both houses of the General Assembly this week was a compromise. Some would have liked a sweeping court reform plan, overhauling our entire judicial system. Others would have preferred no change in the present court system. But, the new law represents the thinking of a vast majority who feel our court system is basically sound subject to some improvement in our inferior court system and our Justice of the Peace System.

Basically, the plan which passed the General Assembly will give the people the right to decide whether court reform is needed. If the citizens of North Carolina adopt the constitutional amendment at the next general election, the following General Assembly will have the authority to establish a uniform system of district courts to take the place of the present maze of inferior courts below the superior court level.

Also, the present Justice of the Peace system will be replaced by so-called Magistrates who will have about the same jurisdiction as the present Jaycees with one important exception. Their income will not be dependent upon their convictions.

In other legislative matters, a bill providing for North Carolina to participate in a federal "medical assistance for the aged" program ran into a crossfire of conflicting opinions before the House Health Committee Wednesday.

Doctors, dentists, pharmacists and hospital administrators urged the House to adopt the bill. But Ramey Kemp and other spokesmen for State Associations of Chiropractors and Optometrists proposed an amendment to make sure their services would be included in the medical assistance program. Their amendment would also eliminate a provision calling for a council to assist the State Board of Welfare in administering the assistance program. This council, it is felt, would be dominated by the doctors, dentists, pharmacists and hospital representatives. They suggested advisory committees representing various medical professions be used instead.

It is my understanding the warring factions have closed ranks and the amendments will be adopted. There is, however, a third group opposing the medical aid plan. This group—the Senate Association of County Commissioners—asked us to vote against the program because it discriminates against indigent children and disabled persons.

If this bill becomes law, recent figures indicate there are approximately 331 people in Davie County who would be eligible for medical aid. This aid will cost $17,662 annually, of which the County's part will be $1,986.

This week, the House received a bill that would put North Carolina's teen-age drivers on probationary driving status and ban them from nighttime driving between their 16th and 18th birthdays. Rep. Stedman Hines of Guilford said his bill is designed to make teenagers conscious of good driving habits during the years when they are learning to drive.
