VOL. NO. 59

COOLEEMEE, N. C., THURSDAY, JULY 28, 1966

Our 60th Anniversary

Anniversaries are laden with mixed emotions. To each person in advancing age, there is a feeling of sadness caused by a sense of loss. Oldsters look back upon things which they experienced and valued, and deplore the fact that the new generation has discarded them, and plunged into behaviour which contradicts the values which oldsters hold dear. The oldster must look back and look around. There are a lot of vacant chairs in the home, church, business and professions, and those left behind feel a sense of loss.

There is some difference in the experience of an institution-like a school, church, or business organization. Individuals who make up the institution feel loss as only individuals can, but as members of an institution, much of the past is carried on into the new. In institutions the past and present merge, and individuals and organizations embody and carry on much of the best of the past. Ideals which have proven to be worthy are carried on and in them the old generation lives in the new, so that, as the Scriptures say: "He being dead yet speaketh."

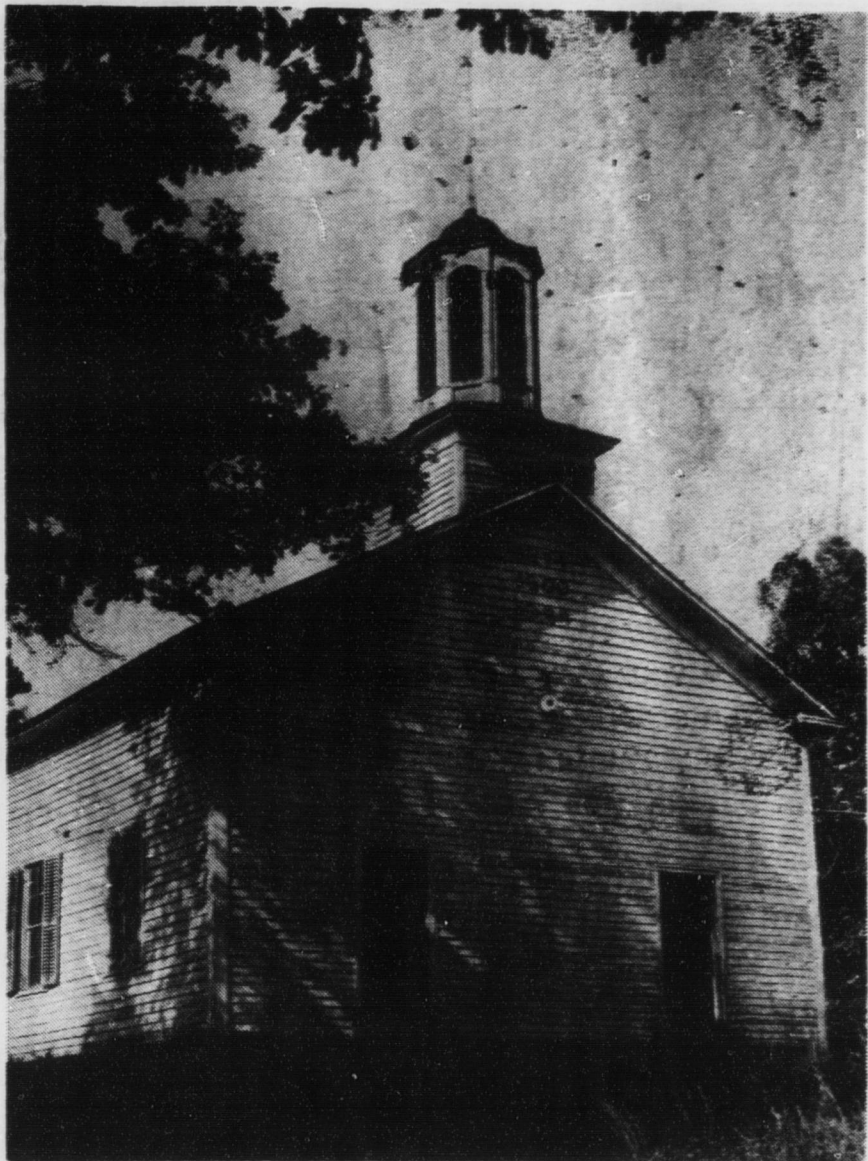

In the Journal we have endeavored to carry on in the spirit and the ideals of the founder. He is remembered in a deep affection; and while we live and move and have our being and responsibility in a different age, we hope and believe, that those who came before us continue to live with us in making the JOURNAL an instrument of communicating the old spirit into a new and ever-expanding world. We feel some pride in thinking that we have, in some degree, fulfilled this purpose, and that we are a part of yesterday, and today—and shall try to so live and work that we shall have some part in the future. An institution has a continuous life, and we are proud to be a part in the life of the Cooleemee Journal.

Getting out a newspaper is not an ice-cream-and-cake job. It has its trials and tribulations, its discouragements and frustration; yet, it has a glory, even if only in a small way it contributes to the life of the community.

No one is more sensible of our failures than we are, and we are constantly trying to improve. But there is a glory in our associations with the people in our area; our subscribers, advertisers, readers.

From all these we draw warmth of spirit, friendship, affection, faith and courage. It makes us glad to be alive and live and serve our generation in such noble company. We have measured the hearts of the people in our community, and we know that they are rich in sympathy, affection, and understanding. To us, all this gives a glory to life which makes us happy to be a part of a community so rich in those spiritual qualities, which gives us an appreciation of the past, satisfaction in the present, and faith in the future—even a hope and belief in an eternal life.

There are so many things that we would like to say, but to all we say; THANK YOU FOR EVERYTHING — and hope that you understand.

Nations Most Even Climate North Carolina

The Sandhills in the southern Piedmont and the Thermal Belt in the southwestern Piedmont of North Carolina boast climates as equable year around as any part of the country. A Department of Commerce study attributes this largely to the protection afforded by the Appalachian Mountains. Also to the sandy topsoil which provides rapid drainage so that the sun is able to dry the surface quickly following a rain.

Davie Watershed Project Sent To Congress

Mocksville — The badly battered Dutchman Creek watershed project, on which numerous Davie County residents have spent numerous months of work, was one of 50 similar projects sent to Congress on Monday by the budget bureau.

All 50 projects had been held up by the bureau because of President Johnson's position that they should be acted upon by Congress itself rather than just by committees of Congress, a spokesman said.

He said the list was sent to Congress with the understanding that in the future such projects will go before the House and Senate for action.

Under a '54 law, watershed proposals approved by the Agriculture Department have gone to the bureau of the budget and then have been submitted to Congress, with larger projects going to the House and Senate Public Works committees and smaller ones to the two Agriculture committees for consideration.

The Dutchman Creek Watershed project would be a system of nine floodwater retaining structures and would improve 75 miles of stream channel that drain into the Dutchman Creek channel area in Davie County.

Object of the project would be to reduce flood hazard on 4,280 acres of agricultural land within the watershed and 605 acres of land downstream on the Yadkin River.

Mrs. Ruby Gales of Mocksville, is spending this week in Anderson, S. C. with her husband, Everett. They are looking for a house there.
