VETERANS' CORNER

North Carolina veterans who have received GI loans for the purchase of homes were reminded today that they remain personally liable on their note and mortgage when they sell their homes if the new buyer merely continues the payments on the GI loan.

W. R. Phillips, Manager of the Veterans Administration Regional Office, Winston-Salem, N. C., advised veterans that liability continues until the loan is paid in full or until veterans are personally released by the VA on the obligation.

"The VA has guaranteed and approved many home loans in the area under our jurisdiction," Phillips said. "We have experienced cases where veterans have sold their properties and were led to believe they had no further responsibility for the mortgage debt."

He warned veterans who may be behind in their payments due on GI loans to be very careful before agreeing to offers by strangers to make up their back payments if the veterans will sign contracts.

Phillips said that if such a proposition is made, veterans should ask the holder of their mortgages or the Loan Guaranty Division of the VA Regional Office, Winston-Salem, N. C., for advice on the validity of the offer.

He stressed that the veteran remains personally liable for the payment of his GI loan if it is not paid by someone else. Even though the buyer takes over the mortgage and agrees to make the payments, until the VA provides a written release from liability, the veteran is held responsible.

ON CAR SAFETY
The Senate Commerce Committee has made tentative agreement on a formula for mandatory federal safety standards for automobiles. If final agreement is made, the 26 items of safety required by the government would become effective on the 1968 model.

SORRY!

The first AAA-Bonanza Mobile Homes franchises are gone. If you wait much longer the Salisbury area, which is proving to be a profitable mobile home market, may not be available either. Proof of the market potential is that one home in five sold in the United States last year was a mobile home. Your profit margin or return on invested capital is considerably higher than many other businesses. AAA Enterprises provides a full package. You get complete management and sales training, sales supervision, advertising assistance and support, and a quality inventory consisting of top sellers in the mobile home industry. AAA Enterprises franchises offer security and financial independence. If you want more details on how AAA Enterprises can help you own your own business with an investment of $10,000 to $15,000,
