Brush Burning Permits Required

On October 1, the North Carolina Brush Burning Permit Law came into effect again, through June 1 of next year. It means that all persons planning to do any burning after four o'clock in the afternoon and before midnight will have to have a burning permit, if the area to be burned is more than 100 feet from an occupied dwelling house or within 500 feet of woodlands protected by the forest service. Due to the expanded Warden and Permit Agent program, Davie County residents will have little trouble getting the permits this year.

The Fire Warden program provides for resident fire fighters, on a temporary basis, in the more distant areas from volunteer fire departments. Their locations are easily spotted by the vivid yellow sign posted at the roadside. Each Warden is responsible for fire suppression in his district, in cooperation with other agencies, and can also issue burning permits and will provide burning information for those who need it. The Wardens in the program are David Essex, in the Mocksville township; Wade Groce, of Farmington, who is also Fire Chief of the Farmington Volunteer Fire department; Edward Beck of Clarksville township, on the Liberty Church Road; Jerry Reavis of Sheffield; Larry G. Stephens in the Jerusalem area, who also services as the Assistant County Ranger for the entire County. Each Warden is equipped to fight forest fires with tools and equipment provided by the N. C. Forest Service. Forest Fires should be reported to these district wardens, as well as to the Davie County Fire Control.

The Burning Permit Agents in Davie County are designated by the Davie County Forester to provide permits for residents who need them, and there is one in each area of the county. The Permit locations are: Baileys Shell Station at Fork; D. D. Bennett & Sons Grocery at Cornatzer; Cartner's Sinclair Service on the Statesville Highway; Coole-
