BATIK — the 2000 year old art of wax writing is being shown in the Davie County Public Library. This craft was used in making batik garments worn by people of ancient Egypt and Persia. It is also associated with India, China, Japan and most countries in the East.

Batik means "a cloth of little dots" and its making was first a parttime but the process was later used generally for clothing. It is produced by a time-consuming and painstaking dyeing process.

Descriptions of the work, pictures of many typical designs and detailed instructions for trying it yourself are to be found in "Batik, the Art and Craft", by Ila Keller. The book may be borrowed from your Davie County Public Library.

Materials on display in the library were brought from the Pacific Islands by Mary Martin Etchison.

Incomprehensibility
Incomprehensibility is the longest word I know I had to write it many times in the school where I did go. It was the favorite punishment of the teachers on the staff.

Whenever we in class did talk, chew gum, or had to laugh. I had to laugh quite often, quite often I did write Incomprehensibility, though it took me half the night. I still know how to spell it, although I use it not. Incomprehensibility is something I have got.
