High Rock Lake Association Has New Officers And Directors

SALISBURY — The High Rock Lake Association has undergone reorganization with a new slate of officers and directors.

Formerly, the organization included only the north and northeast side of the lake. The Rowan side has now been added to encompass the entire shoreline.

Officers and directors from Rowan County have been added, in addition to those from Greensboro, High Point, Lexington, Winston-Salem and a number of other Piedmont communities whose residents use the lake for recreation.

Dr. Trent Busby, of Salisbury, executive vice president, said the purpose of the reorganization is to facilitate cooperation between property owners, people who use the lake, and the Aluminum Corporation of America, the Federal Power Commission and the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission.

"Our aim," said Dr. Busby, "is to protect the lake's recreational values and to arouse more public interest in one of the Piedmont's finest outdoor areas."

Dr. Busby said the group will sponsor water safety programs and will possibly install markers to warn boaters about submerged objects.

The association is opening a membership drive. The group hopes to secure memberships from everyone who uses High Rock Lake for recreational purposes.

Most County Clubs Of ECC Students Now Have Chairmen

GREENVILLE — Most N. C. counties now have active clubs of East Carolina College students to serve as personal messengers between campus and home town.

Organization of the county clubs has taken place quickly as a result of an effort by student President Stephen B. Sniteman to actively involve students in overall development of East Carolina.

Sniteman called a mass meeting several weeks ago to stimulate campus-wide interest in his idea. He had ECC President Leo W. Jenkins and State Senator Robert B. Morgan, chairman of the trustees, on hand to speak to the students.

Each county club organized so far has a chairman who is taking the lead in planning club activities. Those activities include making speeches about East Carolina back home, visiting home county schools and other organizations to provide information about East Carolina, and talking to individuals back home to explain, in President Sniteman's words, "that East Carolina is really rendering a great service to the cause of education."

Sniteman's main idea in getting the clubs started, he said, was "to actively involve ourselves in filling a gap in understanding and accurate information of the true purposes,

CHARLES D. TUTTEROW accomplishments and goals of our college."

But, he said, club functions will go much beyond that. They will be called on to furnish hosts and hostesses when home county groups or individuals visit East Carolina. And they will be asked to supply official delegates to accompany ECC officers on trips to home counties.

From Davie County is Charles David Tutterow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Tutterow, Route 4.

LOCAL FAMILY—Robert Wellman Jordan, his wife, Tronia Beck Jordan, and daughters, Anita, age 3 years and Teresa, age 6. Both Mr. and Mrs. Jordan are employed at the VA Hospital in Salisbury, N. C. They reside at their home on Marginal Street Extension. Bob is a member of the North Carolina State Football Officials, and has been a member for the past fifteen years. They have 200 members in this association. They officiate at high school football games, and work all over this section of the state including Greensboro, High Point and Winston-Salem, but cannot work in their own hometown. To be able to belong to this association, you must take a North Carolina State examination once a year, attend clinics once a week during the months of July, August and September. The season begins in September and continues through the middle of November.

Bob has proven himself very capable in this work and his knowledge and rules of the game is respected by the players and the association.

Central Carolina Bank Reports Record Year

Local Men Paint Dormitories At Crossnore

On Saturday, February 25, the coldest day of the year, a group of workers set out at six o'clock in the morning bound for Crossnore, North Carolina. As the mountains came into view, they were majestic in the sunrise with a dusting of snow across the peaks.

Immediately upon arrival at the Mary Martin Sloop dormitory, eleven men went to work with paint brushes, rollers, and buckets of blue and yellow paint. Ten dormitory rooms and two halls were brightened to an almost like new appearance during the day's work.

At noon, the workers were privileged to share lunch in the dining room on the campus with the children in the boarding school. A very hearty and delicious lunch was enjoyed. Each one was seated at a different table so that they could meet and learn to know the children.

During the morning and afternoon, energies were revived by delicious snacks prepared and served by the Sloop Dormitory housemothers, Miss Flo Phillips and Miss Louise Roberts.

Making the trip were C. W. Shepherd, J. G. Crawford, Denny Creason, Sam Carter, Fred Pierce, Craig Snead, Allen Snipes, Jerry Cope, Alfred Coble, Hudson Hoyle, and Bob and Alice Hoyle. Tina Hoyle went along to visit with her cousin, Margaret, who is a student at Crossnore.

It would be hard to put into words what this experience meant to those who participated, or the gratitude of those who benefited from the work.

New records were set by Central Carolina Bank in nearly every financial category in 1966. Announcement of the bank's most successful year was made by Chas. F. Bahnsen, assistant vice president and Cooleemee manager, following the 63rd annual meeting of CCB shareholders and directors on Thursday in Durham.

Bahnsen said deposit growth from $71.9 million to $90.8 million exceeded that in any previous year. Installment loans were up 11% to $13.8 million, and total loans reached $48.2 million — an increase of 17% over year-end totals for 1965.

Total capital, Bahnsen said, advanced from $5.2 million to $5.5 million. Capital stock totaled $1,557,517, after payment last month of a 5% stock dividend to shareholders. A transfer of $433,338 from undivided profits to surplus moved the bank's total capital and surplus to $5,250,000. Not only does this move strengthen and reinforce the bank's capital structure, Bahnsen said, it also increases the loan limit (to any one borrower) to $550,000.

The bank's shareholders authorized issuance of up to 1,000 shares of the common stock of the corporation to be made available for purchase by employees of the bank. Bahnsen said a voluntary stock purchase plan had previously been established, and the shareholders' action assures a continuing supply of stock for the plan.

At the meeting, Chairman George Watts Hill paid special tribute to two directors whose deaths occurred in 1966. They were George W. Kane of Roxboro, a member of the bank's Board for many years; and L. Norris Rogers of Rolesville, a charter member of the Wake Forest Board.

Among items of major interest at the meeting was the bank's building program, which projects new buildings in 1967 for Chapel Hill, Butner, Mocksville, and the Research Triangle Park area.

Members of the Mocksville Board were re-elected by the shareholders. They are: M. H. Murray, chairman; Ben C. Ellis; George R. Hendricks; Robert L. Hendricks; T. L. Junker; D. J. Mando; Lester P. Martin, Jr.; George E. Merrell, Jr.; Sheek Miller; E. C. Morris; W. W. Smith; and Paul H. Stroud.
