CCB Time Deposit Rates Upped

Interest rates on passbook savings have been increased to 4½ percent by Central Carolina Bank, CCB president Paul Wright, Jr. said today. The new rate, authorization for which was given by the Federal Reserve Board yesterday, is effective as of January 1.

Certificates of deposit now carry a higher rate also, Wright said. Certificates in amounts less than $100,000 pay rates as follows: Single maturities on deposit more than two years, 5¾ percent; more than one year, 5½ percent; multiple maturities held more than ninety days, 5 percent.

Those certificates for $100,000 or more with a maturity of more than one year now carry a rate of 7½ percent. For those 180 days to one year, the rate is 7 percent; for 90-179 days, 6¾ percent; for 60-89 days, 6½ percent; and for 30-59 days, 6¼ percent.

"In our economy, the role of the saver and the investor is a vital one," Wright said. "It is they who, by their thrift, make the wheels of commerce and industry turn. They are entitled to the higher return on their savings which we are now permitted to pay."
