"SELL TOGETHER"

Sing a song of six pence
Mother's working too,
Boys and girls stay out of school,
What can a farmer do?

Price of cotton much too low,
Tobacco just the same,
Everybody's busted—
It's an awful game.

Just one way to beat it,
To get a price thats right.
Sign and Sell together,
Then we'll all see light.

Too many of us measure success by the standard of our own littleness.

The beer lovers didn't get much consolation over the action of Congress.

It is also true that man is known by the company he keeps away from.

It is really a mistake to suppose that all the stage robbers are theatrical managers.

Many a bride sweeps up the isle of a church who would faint at the very sight of a broom.

It's all right, in a way, to talk about our ancestors. They are dead and can't get back at us.

There is nothing lovers enjoy more than a moonlight night, unless it is a night when there is no moon.

There seems to be no limited sphere for women. One has been appointed forest ranger in the Yellowstone.

The ostrich, burying its head in the sand, is no more foolish than the man who is blind to his own faults.

The funeral of a man who York states that the aviation world also no move.

"Riding habits," says a fashion writer, "are very costly this season." It is this sort of thing that makes the walking habit so popular.—Punch (London).

"You may insult me, but don't insult a customer," said the head of a great business to an elevator boy who displayed more rudeness than tact to his unknown employer.

A woman in New York is deploring prohibition. "The saloons always had clocks where you could see them, and there was a saloon on every corner, she says. "Now I've had to sell a wrist watch."

"How much does a farm hand charge for a full day's work?" "I dunno," said Farmer Comtossel. "I s'pose my idea is influenced by the way I was raised. At the present time, so far as I can see, there ain't any such thing as a full day's work" —Washington Star.

THE NATIONAL GAME.

A Baseball Poem styled by its Author "The National Game" was recently received in a letter from 1st Class Private R. W. Adams attached to the Medical Depot, 42nd Division, of the A. E. F. It was written by Byron Beardsley, Q. M. C.

The Huns had not been challenged nor scheduled to appear
But the game four years ago on the German-Belge frontier;
The Allied team was crippled but had no time to stall,
For the cause of Domination had plainly cried "Play Ball".

In the early innings of the game the Germans took the lead,
Their forty years of practice had developed lots of speed;
The Allied southpaw, Belgium, was pitching cleaver ball
But his comrades and his captain consider him too small.

So rather than loose the game by taking such a chance
They shifted him to second and substituted France.
The Germans thought the time was ripe to carry out their mission
And figured they could win the game thru' France's poor condition.

A "Boche" came up and toed the plate and trippled over Arras
He decided he could stretch the hit and slide right into Paris.
But the ball was neatly handled by fielders that were clever,
And in the famous battle of the Marne, he was tagged by General Joffre.

The lucky seventh rolled around, the Allies came to bat,
Old Kaiser Bill was pitching and his arm was sore at that;
Canada singled over Vimy Ridge he willingly paid the price,
The Edith Cavelle walked to the plate and came thru' with a sacrifice,

Italy slammed an offensive which rang with a resounding thud,
His spikes got tangled in intrigue and he tripped and fell in the mud.
And a clever drive for a single was made by the British Isles
"Thanks!"

The splendid Allied rally had filled the Huns with doubt
With two men on and one down the Russian Bear struck out.
So Hindenburg who's catching has called for the Kaiser's "Spitter"
And swinging his bat on the sidelines is "Sammy" the clubs pinch hitter.

His eye is keen, his spikes are sharp, he's filled with the courage of youth,
Democracy gleams in his clear grey eyes like hat bears the trade mark of truth.
Now the game has reached its finish there is nothing to tell you more
For every one in this world has got the complete box score.

Recited by John J. Egan at the Paris K. of C. clubhouse with great success.

LINKS WITH HISTORIC PAST

Interesting to Trace the Names of Streets and Lanes in City of Boston Today.

The names of the streets and lanes of Boston are closely linked with the historic past. Others there are which could be connected with Boston only even as a corruption of "Trimountain," by which name Boston was known in the early settlers on account of the three high hills that serve as a background to the peninsula. This replaced the name "Shawmut," given to it by the Indians. Mary Harriet Northend writes in the Century Magazine that the streets of this quaint city in the East were laid out by straying cattle.

After the Revolution the names of many Boston streets were changed. Queen street became Court street, and King street the main street of today. School street took its name from a school that was erected there. Dark alleys, leading off the principal streets at every step, were named after pathways usually dependent on where they led to. Creek lane originally led to the old creek. It was in tavern days that this was the center of stage coach life. The old Province house once stood on Flag alley. Corn court took its name from the fact that the corn market was at one time situated there. Summer street was once known as "Seven Star Lane." It is now one of Boston's busiest streets.

LIVED LONG ON FRUGAL DIET

Englishman Who Died in 1630 Proved That It Was Possible to Live Out Existence Cheaply.

Thomas F. Cotton, the champion eater of Massachusetts, declared that dyspepsia is the result of eating too little, and not too much. His Sunday dinner consisted of thirteen lobsters, sixty eggs, and one hundred oysters. At the other end of the scale must be placed old Henry Crab, the first vegetarian, who died September 11, 1630, after proving that a man could live on 10 cents a year. Originally a haberdasher in a big way of business at Chesham, England, a free liver and drinker of strong ales, he "got religion"—also dyspepsia—in middle life, sold his stock, gave the proceeds to the poor, and took to living in a hut on three-farthings a week. Instead of "strong drinks and wines," he says in his autobiography, "I give the 'old man'—he figures centuries too soon to call it 'Sir Mary'—a cup of water," and, instead of roast mutton, rabbit with broth and pudding made with bran and dandelion leaves chopped together." And on this diet he lived a ripe old age, surviving repeated lodgings in jail and imprisonment for witchcraft.

Franklin's Court Harmonica.

One of the first musical instruments made by an American was a mouth harmonica made by Benjamin Franklin at the time when he was minister at the court of Louis in France, where he played it with considerable skill before Marie Antoinette and her court ladies.

The queen was so delighted and interested that Franklin presented the little instrument to her. After Marie Antoinette was beheaded in the great French revolution, a mouth harmonica was a most sensational manifestation. It came into the possession of a certain musical amateur and collector in this country, who has it, I believe, to this day.—Yankee America.

The Hours of Thirty-Five.

Study of the relation between the total length of life and the time required to reach maturity has brought out an interesting comparison between men and horses. A horse at five years old is said to be comparable, as old as a man at twenty, and therefore may be expected to behave accordingly. Applying to other mammals the number of the years of life and the number of years required to reach maturity, it is found that the ratio of thirty-five is comparable with a span of about a century.—New York Herald.

Here's why CAMELS are the quality cigarette

BECAUSE we put the utmost quality into this one brand. Camels are as good as it's possible for skill, money and lifelong knowledge of fine tobaccos to make a cigarette.

Nothing is too good for Camels. And bear this in mind! Everything is done to make Camels the best cigarette it's possible to buy. Nothing is done simply for show.

Take the Camel package for instance. It's the most perfect packing science can devise to protect cigarettes and keep them fresh. Heavy paper—secure foil wrapping—revenue stamp to seal the fold and make the package air-tight. But there's nothing flashy about it. You'll find no extra wrappers. No frills or furbelows.

Such things do not improve the smoke any more than premiums or coupons. And remember—you must pay their extra cost or get lowered quality.

If you want the smoothest, mellowest, mildest cigarette you can imagine—and one entirely free from cigaretty aftertaste,

It's Camels for you.
