HUB HARDWARE CO.

Farmville's Only Exclusive Hardware Concern

The complete hardware store is a real asset to the business life of the community in which it is located and whose people it serves.

No hardware company has a more complete equipment or stock, nor finer facilities for handling a large and comprehensive business than has the Hub Hardware Company, Inc., of Farmville.

This company's establishment is more than a mere hardware store. It is an institution supplying householders, builders, painters, farmers, mechanics and persons employed in various crafts with the tools of their trades or otherwise needed in their every day pursuits.

The Hub Hardware Company was established twelve years ago and incorporated about three years ago, the volume of business having become such that expansion of scope was essential to keep pace with progress. This live-wire enterprise has extended its field well beyond the confines of Farmville. Indeed, the limits of Pitt county do not "bound" the field of this company's activity, especially in the farm implement and building material line.

The members of this firm are progressive men, versed in the hardware business and good business men. They are keenly alive to their opportunity and are to be counted upon at all times to work for the welfare and advancement of Farmville.

RIALTO THEATRE

"All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," and without the Rialto Theatre and the relaxation and amusement it affords, many a dull evening would be spent by a great many.

There the hard-working head of the family may seek forgetfulness of the cares of business and the women and children, too, greatly enjoy the mysteries of the screen.

The Rialto Theatre is one of the foremost places of the town—a necessity, rather than a luxury, and should receive the hearty support and patronage of all.

Mr. P. G. Walker, the new manager of the Rialto Theatre here, is showing only the very best and latest pictures and is building up a business to the entire satisfaction of his patrons.
