County.

Mrs. Johnson and the six children did a good job of running the farm while Mr. Johnson was Campaigning during the early summer weeks. It was as a result of this that the report became current that Mrs. Johnson was not going to Washington if her husband was elected.

Senator Magnus Johnson is happy that his wife is going with him. He quite frankly admits that she is his boss. Whether he remains in public life after serving his short term depends altogether, he says, upon what she decides.

The 140 acre Johnson Farm is a typical Minnesota home, equipped with modern machinery; forty head of cattle, twenty-four of which are milk cows; forty Duroc and Chester White hogs; 300 chickens and eight horses. Every member of the family is kept busy running the place, Mrs. Johnson milking seven cows at least once a day.

Magnus Johnson was born in Sweeden and came to America an immigrant in 1891. Mrs. Johnson, however, is a typical gray-haired, pleasant-faced and ideal American mother, who traces her descent back to General Israel Putnam on her mother's side.

Mrs. Johnson is very positive that the nation is going to be surprised if it thinks that Senators Brookhart and LaFollette are going to lead her fighting husband around in their legislative ranks. "He has a mind and ideals of his own," she says.

The Johnson home loves books. Every member of the family is a great reader.

Lillian, the oldest girl of the family, will keep the house going when her mother and father go to Washington. Victor, 21; Francis, 19, and Magnus, Jr., 14, will run the farm.

"No doubt, I will have a very pleasant time in Washington," said Mrs. Johnson, "That is, as pleasant a time as any mother could be expected to have when her family is divided, as our own will be, for the first time. Yes, I am in favor of women in politics but I have never had time for it. Six children and a busy life on the farm, was all I was able to handle in the last thirty years."

These are the things Magnus Johnson says he will favor and oppose at Washington:

Favor fixed prices of grain, making possible fixed profit to growers.

Favor diversified farming.

Favor government ownership public utilities.

Favor soldiers' bonus; recognition of Russia; wage increase of all railroad men; woman suffer age; retention of political parties; national budget; brotherly love amongst nations, classes and individuals; any educational measure which gives good books to citizens; unanimous decision in the United States Supreme Court.

Oppose the League of Nations; World Court, military training in schools, and war.

Mrs. Johnson smiles and says she votes YES with her husband on every issue.
