Friday, April 17th, 1925 VISIT THE EXPOSITION

The Eastern Carolina Exposition got away to a fine start Monday with every indication of being a great success. The people of Smithfield and Johnston county are to be congratulated for having provided such excellent facilities for holding the exposition, which has already become a fixture of annual events in the annals of Eastern Carolina. While Eastern North Carolina has been making progress all these years, the holding of an exposition has given a great impetus to the advertising of its wares. Advertising plays an important part in modern doings, and the exposition furnishes an excellent vehicle for letting this section of the state see itself as it is and to show people from other sections what it is. Every person interested in the continued progress of Eastern North Carolina ought, if possible, to visit the exposition. It will not only prove an impetus to the exposition but it will also be a means of valuable education for themselves. It will help both ways. It will give them new pride in their state, and will enable them to work more intelligently for its advancement and for the advancement of their own interests. The Exposition closes Saturday night.

State Gasoline Tax Totals $4,529,000

During 1924 North Carolina collected $4,529,000 from the tax of three cents per gallon on gasoline, statistics for that year show. Out of 36 states having a gasoline tax ranging from one to five cents per gallon, she stood fourth in total collections. The states ranking above her were California with $11,968,000, Pennsylvania with $9,089,000 and Indiana with $4,925,000.

ASKS TO BE LOCKED UP But Sheriff Grant Raises $150 so Send Her to the Hospital

Her lips quivering, and with a suppliant look in her eyes, an attractive young woman approached Sheriff Grant recently. "Please, Sheriff," she asked, "lock me up. I am a dope addict, and I want to break myself of the habit. Tell me where I cannot get morphine." The young woman, on the sheriff's questioning, told a heart-rending story about how she had innocently acquired the habit, and of her long, unrelenting struggle to withdraw the poisonous drug. The sheriff was touched. He not only locked her in the detention quarters of the jail, a neat little room especially reserved for women prisoners, but immediately got in touch with the county hospital, requesting that the young woman be admitted to the institution. She was admitted. Her case is being treated by the hospital.

The young woman, of course, did not have the necessary funds, so she would have applied for treatment at a sanatorium. It was up to the sheriff, and he got busy the next day. "I am begging for the first time in my life," the sheriff would say, as he approached friends for aid, "but it is a mighty needy case." Then he would explain the predicament of the young woman in such eloquent, convincing terms, that not a man turned him down. And not content with doing the work necessary to raise the amount, the sheriff headed the list with a $25 contribution. Now the young woman is at the state hospital, battling against the dope habit, with the aid of experienced medical attention.
