

No Lack of Materials Now to Retard Home Building

The United States government says, "build Now," because homes are needed.

Bankers and dealers in investment securities say, "Build Now," because they have money tied up in their vaults for this safest of all investments.

Dealers in building materials say, "Build Now" and they are putting the cost or their wares down as low as possible to encourage immediate building.

Churches say, "Build Now" for the home owners are the staunch supporters of religion.

Cities, towns and villages; industrical corporations, manufacturers, philanthropists, educators, professional people, mechanics, politicians—all say, "Build Now."

there are not enough homes in the United States to fill all needs. It is the demand which influences conditions. If more homes are needed they will be built. There is plenty of lumber, plenty of brick, plenty of cement and plenty of every other material.

What is true everywhere is true in your own town. Scores of people would like to live in their own homes. There is hardly a block in which one or more families would not like to move out of rented house and occupy their own home. A big prorortion of these people will have "pep" enough to carry out their idea. All they need is a little encouragement; a practical demonstration of what owning your own home means; how it can be accomplished and what the result will be.
