Governor S. Wade Marr, of Raleigh, Delivers Inspiring Address Wednesday Night

Rotary is practiced under the flags of thirty-five nations, declared Wade S. Marr, of Raleigh, district governor of Rotary International, in impressing upon the members of the local Rotary club the magnitude of Rotary International. The address was delivered at a special meeting of the Farmville club held Wednesday night on the occasion of theannualvisit of the district governor.

In addressing the club Mr. Marr went into a full discussion of the objects and ideals of the organization and urged upon the members their responsibilities to the community and the world at large as Rotarians.

"Rotary," he said, "is indefinable To define it you must confine it, and if you confine it, it dies," he declared. "The ideal of Retary, 'Service Above Self,' is a goal that is not reached literally by mortals and the nearest that we can hope to attain this detice of the Golden Rule, 'Do unto oth- N- A. Declaring that no man ever gets out of life more than he puts into it and that no club or organization ever lives that does not give back to the world more than it receives, the speaker closed his address with the following ines:

His talk was a great inspiration to

Reduction of 25 P. C. for State To Restrict Credit Through Bankers and Merchants

Raleigh, Nov. 9 .- Dr. E. C. Brooks, president of North Carolina State college, was yesterday named to direct a campaign for a diversified program of agriculture in North Carolina, with the immediate objective of a 25 per cent reduction in cotton acreave for 1927.

Dr. Brooks was chosen by a central committee to which all details were referred under a resolution adopted by the mass meeting called for yesterday by the governor. The committee will meet again on Friday, November 19, to launch the program, and it is probable that a uniform date for a sign up campaign will be adopted. The committee accepted, after amending it in two particulars, a resolution offered by Dr. Brooks in behalf of himself, Dr. I. O. Schaub, director of extension at the college; W. A. Graham, commissioner of agriculture; H. M. Cox, of Mount Olive, chairman of the agricultural committee of the North Carolina Bankers association; U. B. Blalock, general manager of the North Carolina Cotton Growers' association, and N. C. Bartlett, secretary of the Eastern Carolina Chamber of Commerce.
