Poem
 Uncle John

The things that "grow on a feller" ain't always an object of dread... unless it's tobacco or whiskey—or somethin' that flies to his head. It could be—a parcel of wrinkles—a covey of wrinkles or warts, for the things that grow on a feller must be reckoned as different sorta. . . . But—when it's the habit of savin', or the eatin' of regular meals, or—of takin' one's breakfast at sun-up, no matter how lazy he feels! It could be a hunger for readin' or solvin' the problems of life, like sailin' the boys as they should be, or of gettin' along with the wife. . . . It might as well be somethin' noble as somethin' disruptive and bad, for the things that can grow on a feller should render him tranquil and glad! In the capable way of sele-tin' it's risky to judge with a whiz— for the idea that grows on a feller will make him the man that he is.

Have Some Okolehao, which is Hawaiian moonshine, is similar to a combination of vinegar and alcohol.

 Uncle John

Joe Vespunk lived a humble life in the suburbs of our town; he couldn't hardly clothe his wife—his sickness kept him down. We hardly ever noticed Joe—he didn't make much noise—except when the parishal grabbed his errant little boys. Joe lived near the railroad yards—his house wasn't very warm. The little fellows rustled coal—they thought it wasn't no harm. The doctor, if he's called around in 'em, Joe's meager store, he writ out his prescription, but he didn't call no more. The grocer sent his statements, but it didn't do no good; so he started sailin', I reckon. His honest grocer should. Well, circumstances drifted till the clouds refused him breath, and then Joe's burdens lifted when he sarted—starved to death. O, then a glorious tenderness lit up these hearts of ours; we passed the hat—an' buried Joe in stacks an' stacks of flowers!

James J. Corbett says, "Faversham's advice decided me on Luckies"

Famous former heavyweight champion, with Mrs. Corbett at breakfast at their home at Beverly, L. I., recommends Lucky Strikes.

William Faversham, The Popular Actor, writes:

"For years I have been a Lucky Strike enthusiast. In fact, I never smoke any other cigarette. In all my life I have never been troubled with throat irritations. In addition to the enjoyment that I get from the superior quality of Lucky Strike, it is the only cigarette that my voice will never be affected by smoking."

You, too, will find that Lucky Strikes are mild and mellow—the finest cigarettes you ever smoked, made of the finest Turkish and domestic tobaccos, properly aged and blended with great skill, and there is an extra process—"It's toasted"—no harshness, not a bit of bite.
