

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

Washington, D. C., Mar. 23.—Not since Woodrow Wilson marched into Washington at the head of the Democratic cohorts just twenty years ago has the Capital City experienced the sensation of being stood on its head, so to speak. Just as Mr. Wilson came into the office of President with the determination to change everything, so President Roosevelt's administration has adopted the policy that whatever needs to be done shall be done differently.

A Political Revolution
Nothing in this slow-moving city ever moved as rapidly as things are moving here now. Within less than a fortnight a real political revolution has taken place.

In the order of their relative importance, these are not outstanding occurrences under the new government:

First: President Roosevelt has been given powers such as no President of the United States ever had except in war time. The general approval expressed by people in all parts of the country, of the delegation to the executive of power formerly exercised only by Congress, suggests that there was something more than idle talk behind the idea that a dictator was needed. Old-time political observers here say that it reflects a general distrust of Congress. It perhaps is not so much that, as it is impatience with the slowness of Congress.

Second: Under the direction of the new President the organization of the entire banking system of the nation has been started along drastic, deep-reaching lines which promise to weed out the incompetents and crooks in the banking business, place the Federal Government in control of all banks and give depositors far greater assurance of the safety of their bank deposits than they have ever had. How far this program of banking reform will go remains to be seen, but those with long memories recall that it was President Wilson's purpose and that of his advisers to extend the powers of the Federal Reserve System so that eventually every banking institution in the nation would be under full control. The war interrupted that program, but it has come to life again now.

Third: A start has been made toward cutting a thousand million dollars a year off the Government's expenses, of which nearly half will come out of funds now being spent for veterans' relief. President Roosevelt's firm stand against the spending of public money on veterans whose disabilities are not due to their war service overrode the objections of members of both houses of Congress, who gave him the authority he sought to effect that economy.

Fourth: The legislation of beer as a means of raising revenue, has taken such shape that it seems probable that anyone with a thirst for the malt beverage can buy it freely within a few weeks.

Those are the major high-lights of the work of the new administration thus far.

Direct to the People
President Roosevelt came into office believing that the people wanted action, and he has been giving them action. Taking another leaf out of Woodrow Wilson's book, he has gone over the heads of the politicians and direct to the people, in a series of public proclamations and radio addresses, which seem to have struck a responsive chord.

Indeed, even some of the applause for the new President's courageous and vigorous attitude has come from Republican sources. The principal opposition to Mr. Roosevelt's policies has come, in fact, from within his own party. It took Republican votes to pass his economy through the House of Representatives.

The outlook as this is written is that any measure for direct farm relief and aid of the unemployed will not be acted upon until Congress convenes again in April. The President and his advisers are working hard and carefully on the form of legislation they want in both matters.

The belief that some plan for taking so-called marginal lands out of cultivation will be adopted, is growing. Just how far this will follow the domestic allotment plan which was considered by the last Congress remains to be seen.

Mr. Roosevelt's program for unemployment relief is still in the shaping. It is understood that it will involve something like military enlistment of the unemployed, or of several hundred thousand of them, to be put to work on public improvements, such as waterpower dams, flood protection works and the like.

Washington Likes Roosevelt

There is no question that Washington likes the new President. He has brought into public affairs a new atmosphere, with which Washington is not familiar, but it is an atmosphere of activity and of friendliness. The impression which Mr. Roosevelt made upon the newspaper men at his first conference with them was a good one. Not since the first few weeks of the Harding administration has any President permitted reporters to fire questions at him at will. Mr. Roosevelt has resumed this practice, greatly to the delight of the Washington correspondents.

Social Washington has taken the new White House family to its arms. Of course, the Roosevelts are not strangers here, but there is a lot of difference in the social status of an Assistant Secretary of the Navy and a President of the United States. They move in entirely different circles. There have been Presidents and their families who were merely tolerated in the so-called "Society" because of their official standing, but the Franklin Roosevelts have a social status of the highest, regardless of official connection. Alice Roosevelt Longworth gave the cue to the highest circles of Washington society by resuming her intimacy with her cousins in the White House, while Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, another social leader of high position, has also placed her catchet of approval upon them. It is not likely, therefore, that the slanders and scandalous gossip which some of their predecessors in the White House have suffered will be aimed at the Franklin Roosevelts.

The colored man who washes windows in the United Charities building here is named Roosevelt Garner.

Lady Took Cardui And Got Rid of Pain In Her Side

"Last summer, my health was bad, so I began taking Cardui," writes Mrs. E. E. Slaughter, of Norman, Okla. "My mother had given me Cardui in girlhood, so naturally I turned to it when I felt I needed it. I felt run-down and a general weakness. I had bad, dizzy headaches when everything would seem to dance before my eyes. My right side pained me so much, but since taking Cardui the pain has left me. I have taken several bottles of Cardui and have improved a great deal."

Cardui is sold at drug stores here.

Industrial Banks May Join Federal Reserve System

Movement Underway to Enact Legislation To Permit The Industrial Banks to Join Federal Reserve System.

Raleigh, March 22.—Gurney P. Hood, state bank commissioner, today revealed that a well defined movement is underway to have Congress enact legislation to permit industrial banks to join the federal reserve system.

Hood who recently made a trip to Washington and New York to press his suggestion that industrial banks be allowed to buy federal reserve bank stock and thereby become members of the system said it had been found that North Carolina state laws would permit the membership.

"If the industrial banks of the nation could be members of the federal reserve then their industrial paper, the most liquid bank assets in the nation, would be available to the federal reserve as additional basis to back this new currency being issued," Hood said.

GROWING A FLOWER GIRL

ILLUSION:
The magician exhibits a flower pot with hinged sides on a table in the center of the stage. He opens out the sides to show that this container is empty. Closing it up, he places a screen between it and the audience. After a short period of magic incantations he removes the screen. The astounded audience sees a beautiful girl, covered to the shoulders in lovely flowers, rising from the "empty" container. Where did she come from?

EXPLANATION:
The girl was hiding behind the drapes of the table. There is a trap door in the bottom of the flower pot, with a hole large enough to allow her to crawl through. The flowers, called "magicians' feather flowers," are a regular part of a magician's outfit. The flower girl wears a rubber tonic and a bathing cap to keep the flowers compressed into small space. She slides the tonic down and the flowers expand when she emerges.

IT'S FUN TO BE FOOLED ... IT'S MORE FUN TO KNOW

A trick frequently worked in cigarette advertising is the illusion that mildness in a cigarette comes from mysterious processes of manufacture.

EXPLANATION: All popular cigarettes today are made in modern sanitary factories with up-to-date machinery. All are heat treated—some more intensively than others, because raw, inferior tobacco require more intensive treatment than choice, ripe tobacco.

The real difference comes in the tobaccos that are used. The better the tobacco, the milder it is.

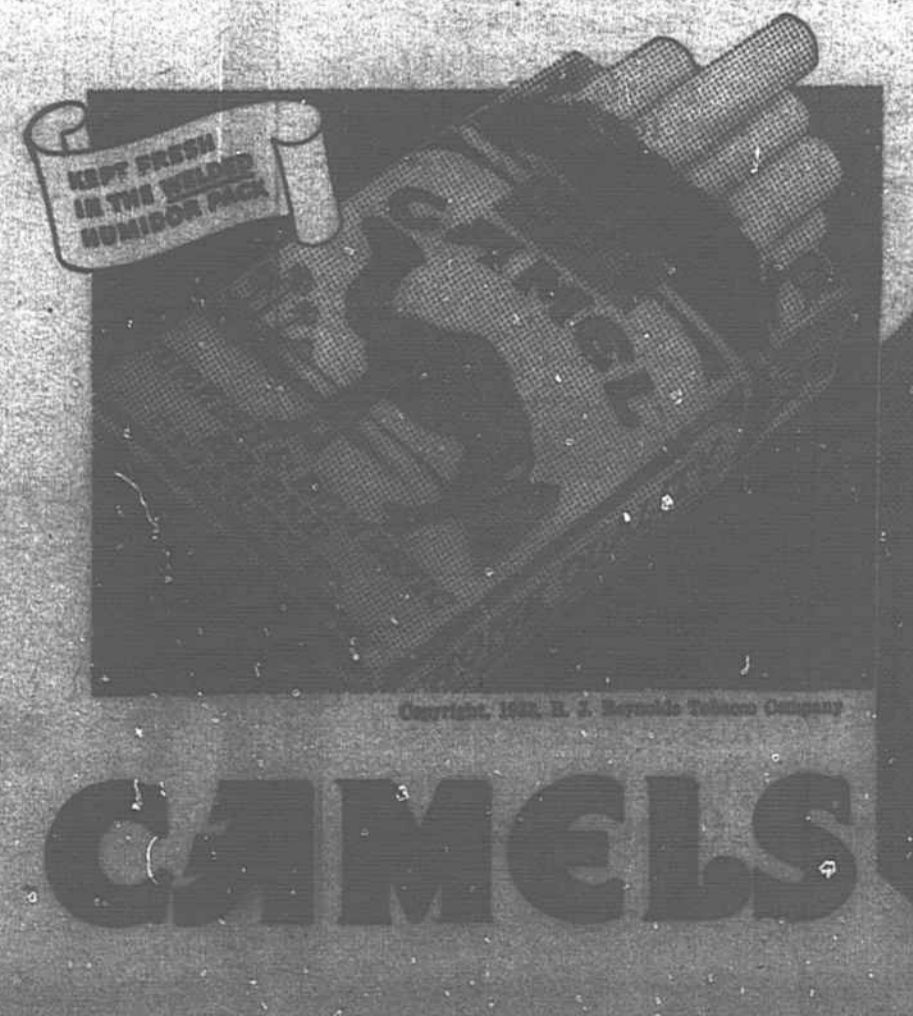

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

That is why Camels are so mild. That is why Camels have given more pleasure to more people than any other cigarette ever made.

It's the secret of Camels' rich "bouquet"... their cool flavor... their non-irritating mildness.

Give your taste a chance to appreciate the greater pleasure and satisfaction of the more expensive tobaccos.
