Farmville Loses A Pioneer Citizen

Farmville paused Tuesday; th business houses were closed and ordinary duties were suspended in the afternoon, while merited honor and respect were paid one of the pioneer citizens of the community, John R. Davis.

Mr. Davis will be greatly missed for his seat in the financial circles of Farmville as a leader, by reason of his astuteness and wise counsel, will be vacant a long time. Always conservative in his views and opinions and of ready decision, he has, during the past fifty years spent in Farmville, lived a useful life and rendered valuable service in the municipal and educational activities of the town.

The Davis brothers, R. L., F. M. and John R., have, from the beginning, when this present wide awake little town was only a sleepy hamlet, been. prominently identified with Farmville, particularly in its business and civic enterprises. They were never idle dreamers, and they have proved themselves doers in the true sense of the word, industrious and enterprising, men of great integrity and splendid merit, being pioneers in the realm of general and time merchandising in this section of the

Not founded on theoretic but practical knowledge, embodying the needs and requirements of this particular community, their business methods have clearly demonstrated the rugged individualism of the American business man in its most commendable form throughout a half century; not given to change in spasmodic bounds. the business of R. L. Davis & Bros., has under their personal supervision, slowly and gradually emerged out of an insignificant country store into a substantial, thriving business establishment, with its founders becoming figures of importance in the business world of Eastern Carolina. Of quiet, dignified bearing, "Mr. John" as he was familiarly known, lived very simply, being regular in in past years of over-production. his personal habits, sound in his

A Date In History

In an editorial analysis of "1933-A Date in History," the magazine "Business Week" reminds us that "within the 12 months, the stream of American business shriveled to its alltime low-water mark. For one agonizing interval, one of its most important tributes ceased to flow at all America learned a new and grimly ironical use of the word 'holiday. Then, under energetic leadership and with a war-time spirit of unity, revival began. We are still deep in economic depression, God knows, but the worst is behind us."

This publication, which keeps close touch with the facts of business conditions, then interprets "two things in the mind of America."

"One is that unbridled rapacity must henceforth be held in check. Greed cannot longer be allowed full play in our economic life. There were few traffic laws when oxcarts plied the roads, but the automobile had to be regulated. Likewise untrammeled individualism was tolerable in a simpler day. But, given the modern industrial machine and the modern bank-money system to drive, it is intolerable. The wrecks are too many, too costly, too lethal.

"The second is that there can be no real prosperity for all of us so long as any large group among us does not share in it.

"There are not new ideas, but it is a new thing to have them generally accepted. They are the basic ideas behind NRA, which sets minimum standards of hours and wages in industry and attempts to make decent rules for competition." The broad program for recovery may have seemed confusing, some of the specific measures may have appeared in the early stages contraductory, yet there "is emerging a clear design" and above all, "the significance of 1933 is that it was the year in which we began seriously to try to Do Something About It."

St. Paul, Jan. 18 .- Death for the wealthy president of a St. Paul bank, held for $200,000 ransom, was threatened by his kidnapers if negotiations for his release called in police or communicated with the newspapers, it was learned today after the adduction of Edward G. Bremer yesterday morning.

The police said they had received no official notification of the abduction and members of the Bremer family refused to discuss it.

Controlling the production of cotton by cooperative action is no new thing to Southern growers. Essay Contest Brings Forth Much Comment

Raleigh, Jan. 17.—Announcement of "Education and Cooperation in the New Deal for Agriculture" as the subject of the seventh annual essay contest of the North Carolina Cotton Growers Cooperative Association has brought forth inquiries and favorable comments from teachers, students and State leaders, M. G. Mann, secretar-treasurer of the cooperative, said this week. Among the letters was one from Dr. A. T. Allen, State superintendent of public instruction, terming the essay contest "one of the most worth while things that is going on." "The topice which you have had are practical topics upon which there is abundant information available, and the effort of the children to go out and study this information and come back and stand on their feet and talk about it is the very kind of exercise that we want to go on in the public school," Dr. Allen wrote 171,000,000 in January 1933. Substitute Lespedeza For Other Legumes

The two hurricanes which swept over northeastern North Carolina last fall almost wiped out the commercial soybean crop. Cow peas, also, are scarce and it is perhaps advisable for eastern growers to think of substituting lespedaza for these two popular summer growing legumes.

"Lespedeza sood also is scarce but less so than soybeans and cowpeas,' ays Enos C. Blair, extension agronomist at State College, who has been making a survey of the situation. The lespedeza may be planted on small grain from February 1 to March 15 and those who plant spring oats might also scatter some lespedeza seed on the oats immediately after they are covered. In other cases, the lespedeza should be covered with weeder, a section harrow or a brush drag. If sown in this way at the ate of 25 pounds to the acre, the rop will make as much hay as will sovbeans or cowpeas except on ex tremely light, sandy soils."

Mr. Blair has found that there will be little surplus soybean seed to ship from the northeastern part of the State this Spring. Growers and dealers both concur in this statement and this is the section which supplies created for the young manhood and North Carolina with the bulk of its
