a better FERTILIZER for better times

"$30.00 per acre average GAIN"

T. N. RICKS and E. N. RICKS, Jr., of Mount Olive, N. C., say: "Some of our best farmers like L. W. Outlaw, E. F. Nunn, Claud Dale, Walter Dale, Mack Williams and T. G. Kilpatrick have been using twice as much potash in their tobacco fertilizers as the average farmers in our section and they find it profitable under our conditions."

"Some have used extra potash now for five years and they figure that the gain has been about $30.00 per acre on the average. Some years it seems to pay more than others, depending on seasons. The extra potash improves the quality and makes larger yields. You can always tell the potash tobacco on the floor."

of some of the most successful bright-tobacco-growers...

CLOSE SPACING Many leading growers who have found that it pays to use closer rows, closer spacing, ridge cultivation and late topping. They get more plants per acre and allow them to make full growth.

THINNING These farmers know, however, that close spacing may result in thin leaf, lacking in texture unless plenty of potash is applied. The potash adds the stain and finish to the leaf. Some farmers are full to get full benches of extra plants because they produce a type of leaf that is rough and red. Extra potash does not make the crop red.

LATE TOPPING The successful growers who practice close spacing and late topping do not top in dry weather. Under average conditions they wait until about 75% of the plants are in bloom and the best leaves are showing. Then they pinch out the buds only.

When the buds are gathered and about one to two crops made on the middle, they carefully consider the weather and top the plants down to where they think it should be. This system cuts down the expense of topping.

More definite information on topping cannot be given because of varying weather conditions. Every farmer must carefully judge his own crop.

EXTRA POTASH FOR COTTON
3-8-8 COTTON FERTILIZER is just as fine a mixture for cotton as 3-8-8 TOBACCO FERTILIZER is for tobacco. 3-8-8 COTTON FERTILIZER contains the extra potash needed to help your cotton prevent rust, control wilt and produce vigorous, healthy plants with less shedding, larger bolls that are easier to pick and better yields of uniform, high-quality lint. 3-8-8 is a better fertilizer for better times. Use it for both tobacco and cotton. IT PAYS!
