CORN

Things so common, yet so momentous, as our daily bread, and the fire by which it is cooked are taken for granted by society, and yet what modern invention is a greater boon to humankind than the adaptation of fire to human needs or the discovery of the uses of grain? Dr. Sylvanus C. Morley, of the Carnegie Institute, has dignified the lowly grain of corn by devoting years of research in its origin and history, and while his discovery that the first corn crop was harvested eight thousand years ago does lend this grain dignity it adds nothing to the savor of the delectable corn muffin or the appetizing corn pone. Particularly interesting is the scientist's theory that corn developed in the highlands of Central Mexico through the chance crossing of a heavy-seeded grass called two-tone with some other wild species resembling sorghum. No doubt the process of hybridization continued through generations. The world will never know how long a time elapsed between the time of nature's perfection of the grain and its discovery by some prehistoric man, or the circumstances under which it was first used for food by man. One wonders how long it took man, after discovering the nutritious and tasty kernel, to learn to plant and cultivate it instead of depending upon nature's haphazard production. To that forgotten aborigine who, thousands and thousands of years ago, first happened upon the rustling stalk whence sprang all the corn cakes and johnnycakes which mankind has been doubly blessed throughout the ages humanity owes more than to the inventor of modern machinery for harvesting it, or to the railroads and steamships which transport it from the corn belt to the dinner table.

AUTO MAGIC

"I don't own a car"—the admission has a guilty ring, so guilty that it must be accompanied by explanations or defenses in this year, 1935 when the average retail price of an automobile is probably less than $750. And what a car it is! It can stand examination with a critical eye—surely it seems as if the mechanical road millennium has dawned. The signs of those who bemoan the passing of old craftsmanship—of what avail are they in the face of this miracle wrought by automatic machines and mass production? Not for $10,000 could the old artisans have produced this graceful efficient and comfortable vehicle costing less on an average than $800. For these reasons the 1935 automobile shows assume an extraordinary economic importance. The new cars meet the requirements of a diminished national income and still come up to the higher standards set by the car-buying public. They conform to changed conditions. Four or five years ago the poorest car could find enough buyers to net its makers a profit. Today the market is smaller and knows good auto flesh. Every automobile show will exhibit nothing but thoroughbreds this year.

SEED CATALOG TIME

About this time, as the Old Farmers' Almanac used to say, look out for seed catalog on the living room table. About now Mr. Householder, in the comfort of the easy chair, pours happily over those glowing pages on which are depicted flowers and vegetables grown in luxuriant qualities, and dreams of the summer's garden triumphs. He may not realize all these dreams. There are plagues of pests to be encountered, the droughts of summer in some spots, and too much rain in others, and the weeds and the heats of August, take the stuffing out of many a fine garden. But blessings be on the head of the seed catalog man. We can forgive him if he paints the roses and the beans a little too flowery and fat. For any inducement that persuades a citizen to spend less time loafing and wandering and fooling, and more time in a useful and healthful pursuit like gardening, helps make a healthier man and better citizen. A trade organ lists 21 ways in which the seed catalog can be used to point out that the seed catalog man is a real help.

To Owners of Live-stock and Pets

Since the latter half of November there has been an epidemic of hog cholera in this section of North Carolina as well as in other parts of the state. There has been announced by Washington Department of Agriculture as of December 1, 1934 that there is Hog Cholera raging throughout 33 states taking in about all of the large farming states. In this case, we know that pork and lard will be bound to be higher in price and every pig saved at this time will be of mutual advantage to everyone. There is only one proper time to immunize service against cholera and that is when the pigs are not over four weeks of age in this particular area. There is another disease of swine that is slowly gaining a foothold in this county and that is Swine Erysipelas which is a contagious disease of swine and nearly as fatal to the herds of swine. If proper steps are not soon taken by the livestock owners, the disease of Swine Erysipelas will be of such an extent that the present methods of control cannot be effective. In order to discuss the control of this disease with the livestock owners of this area, Dr. Smith, the local veterinarian will talk to the farmers at a meeting to be held at 7:30 p. m., January 30, 1935, in the Municipal Building at Farmville. The disease of rabies is slowly spreading over the United States and North Carolina is at the present time experiencing a mild rabies scare. Reports are coming in of rabies in the local surrounding county districts. Early vaccination of dogs before they are exposed to rabies is recommended by the health authorities. Dr. Smith reports that on December 25, 1925 he killed a mad cow in this state sending the beast to Raleigh, and the diagnosis of rabies was confirmed by the State laboratory of Hygiene. This particular case followed a rabies epidemic among dogs in the days of which a school child was bitten about the face by a rabid dog. The child died of the dread disease. An several animals in the vicinity were stricken, one of which happened to be the cow mentioned. From time to time a meeting of the farmers of this section will be called for purposes of advising livestock owners how best to prevent illness among their animals. Remember the meeting, 7:30 p. m. January 30, at the Farmville Municipal Building and be sure to attend and tell others.

Lost 20 Lbs. of FAT In Just 4 Weeks

A St. Louis, Mo., lady wrote: "I'm only 28 years old and weighed 170 lbs. until taking one box of your Kruschen Sits just 4 weeks ago. I now weigh 150 lbs. I also have more energy and furthermore I've never had a hungry moment." Fat folks should take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast—a quarter pound jar lasts 4 weeks—you can get Kruschen at Wholesale Drug Co. or any drug store in America. If not joyfully satisfied after the first bottle—money back.

Dr. N. T. Ennett Visits P. T. A.

The January meeting of Parent-Teachers Association was held Friday, January 18 at three p. m. in Perkin's Hall with ninety-seven members present. Dr. J. C. Woodan paid his first visit to the association and conducted the devotional of the afternoon. A report of the resolutions committee was presented by Mrs. I. E. Satterfield. A petition was sent to the County Board of Education asking that a sewing room be added to the Home Economic Cottage, and a petition to the County Commissioners was sent requesting that the back salaries for the year 1932-33 be paid to the teachers right away. An article, "Is My Child Religious?" was read by Miss Christelle Lucas. This article is one of the many interesting ones to be found in the recent P. T. A. magazine. Mrs. Hoggood introduced Dr. N. T. Ennett, our new County Health officer, who gave an outline of his proposed program of work. The association voted to send a telegram to our state representative requesting him to vote for the Child Labor amendment to the N. D. constitution. The report of the room roll call showed that Miss Annie Perkin's room, one-A, had the greatest percentage of parents present. Miss Copeland's room, seven-A won the attendance flag for the largest percentage of attendance this month. As the association adjourned, all were invited to attend a silver tea given by the Home Economic department in their new cottage.

Standing is General George Gibbs, president of the Postal Telegraph Company, who has thrown his organization back of a plan whereby those unable to attend a Birthday Ball can join in sending a giant greeting to the President and to contribute to the war against infantile paralysis. Seated (left) is Col. Carl Byrd, General Director of the National Committee for the 1935 Birthday Ball; (center) A. Whelan (right) is chairman of the Committee of American Business for the affair. He is organizing business leaders to attend a dinner before the Birthday Ball in the Waldorf-Astoria in New York City. Each visible guest at the dinner will represent invisible guests who, unable to attend the Ball, will listen in on the nationwide radio broadcast. Our Nest Is Empty, Too

Perched in a tree were mother and robin redbreast. In solemn and thoughtful mood, Looking reminiscently into an empty nest. Where once lay their little brood. I saw the sadness in their eyes; Felt the ache within their hearts. Empty that nest! And the clear the sky, A cloud hangs o'er their hearts. They had built that nest with loving care, Of threads as pure as gold, fair, Bound it together with love-knots And downy-lining, kept out the cold. Though built with dream of eternal bliss, That nest is discarded to-day! But it had served its purpose—this: Cradled the birdlets 'til they flew away. We, too, little birds, built us a nest, And hedged it about with care; Made it cozy, quiet, so they could rest, And laid our little ones there. And we, like you, in life's spring-time builded, But, oh, that season is o'er! And only memory's page is gilded With the prattle of on the floor. They now are dreaming and building nests 'Mid bowers their hearts beguiled, While Mother and I keep the empty nest And pray for the nest of each child.
