CHAPTER VIII.—Susan Englebright, known as "Sapphire Sue," who had served a term for blackmail, appeared and asked McKim's protection from the police. She admitted that she had stolen her three ill-cut sapphires rings out of her pocket after she had been in her plans for escape. McKim learned definitely that the rings (or probably Penelope) had called for Frances. McKim also discovered that this woman was Penelope's foster-mother, re-married.

CHAPTER IX.—Stephen warned Penelope by cable to leave Paris, signing his message "Mac." When Flynna went to Doctor Burt to ask him to identify a passport photograph of Penelope Gatlin as Nance Belden, the doctor hypothesized him and impressed on him the subconscious mind that he must never again mention the two names Nance Belden and Penelope Gatlin.

CHAPTER X.—Warned through the joint efforts of McKim and Stephen, Nance fled Paris before Flynna could get the French police on her trail, and popped back into Larry's home in San Francisco. Dan and Lanny were married and accompanied Penelope to New York, where Doctor Burt had engaged the best plastic surgeon in the country to remodel her nose. As McKim had destroyed all her criminal records, this remaining of her looks would bury her identity as Nance Belden. Dan returned when his 40 days in England and reported the operation a success but that three months would elapse before Nance was out of the surgeon's hands. Stephen commissioned McKim to look up the girl's ancestry and living conditions in childhood.

"I hope not. I hope the hypnotic suggestion I gave her is strong enough to overcome her acquired instinct for illness."

"Were the things she told you illuminating?"

"Very. I suspected most of them and she confirmed my suspicions. We know now that Penelope is of sound ancestry. Her father was not a neurotic. If he hadn't been a normal, gallant fellow and physically fit, he would never have become a captain of cavalry. He was killed in action. But we were arrived at a starting point, Dan—the reason for the mental shock that gave Penelope a disassociated personality."

"I didn't get that—at least not quite, Stephen."

"For some reason best known to themselves, the Gatlins kept from Penelope the fact that she was not their own flesh and blood. However, while we have definitely established the date of the mental shock and the character of the shock, we have also established the causative factors leading up to the shock. Penelope had a most unhappy childhood. From earliest childhood she was the victim of bitter, rebellious thoughts. Then that baseball wrecked her nose. This was a mental and physical shock. The separation and divorce of the Gatlins was another terrible shock, because she lost Gatlin and there was nobody to protect her. And Gatlin's death was a severe shock. Then, as she emerged from childhood into maidenhood, the knowledge that her nose made her hideous naturally became an obsession with her."

"Now, Dan, by this time there was no further necessity for concealing the facts of the child's birth. Gatlin, dead, had left his entire estate in trust to Penelope, and on her eighteenth birthday she was free to do as she pleased. She could leave her half-out of an adopted mother now. She carried her own check book, and she knew that she was not free and blood of the beloved Gatlin came as a terrible shock and with it of course came other terrifying speculations."

"More piling on of the infernal complex," McKim interrupted. "And she cracked under it. Then she made up her mind to forget Mrs. Gatlin—and she did."

"A clear case of auto-hypnosis. Dan, now you've got to run down the record of our Penelope and that of her parents. She must have it and it must be proof of the most convincing character, because such proof is necessary if we are to restore to her her mental tranquility."

"Well," said Dan, "I'll be back presently with the girl's record, and then—"

"Out of the darkness into the sunlight, Mac."

"Well, the next one I find in the darkness will stay there," the chief growled.

The absence of the capable Lanny was a constant reminder to Dr. Stephen Burt of his late agreement to take in a case of dual personality. He returned with an alert scientific feeling to get to work on Penelope Gatlin, and when Dan McKim appeared at the office one day to say by the satisfied smile on the McKim's countenance that all had gone well.

"Let me see the documents," Stephen demanded.

McKim handed over the pile of papers.

"Well, you've done your full duty and have kept the police of various things busy for a few days, but what do you have to show for it?"

"She'll be home next week. The girl's name was a good one."

"And how does the girl feel about the situation now?"

"She's crazy about her new nose and wonders where existing it in a hat."

Lady's Painful Trouble Helped By Cardui

Why do so many women take Cardui for the relief of functional pains at monthly times? The answer is that they want results such as Mrs. Herbert W. Hunt, of Hallsville, Texas, describes. She writes: "My health wasn't good. I suffered from cramping. My pain would be so intense it would nauseate me. I would just drag around, so sluggish and 'de-jesse.' My mother decided to give me Cardui. I began to mend. That tired, sluggish feeling was gone and the pains disappeared. I can't praise Cardui too highly because I know it helped me." If Cardui does not help YOU, consult a physician.

"More cold with less current" naturally means a saving in refrigeration costs. Norge does save that way. And that is only one of the ways it saves.

The Norge Rollator Refrigerator is powered to make more cold than you'll ever need. That means that, no matter how much you may store in your Norge—no matter how hot your kitchen may get—you have absolute certainty that your perishable foods will remain pure, fresh and wholesome till you are ready to use them.

Think what an advantage that gives you in marketing! You buy at special sales—stock up to last you till the next sale. And, of course, you have the additional advantage of "quantity" prices—large cans instead of small ones, a half dozen heads of lettuce instead of one, a whole box of tomatoes instead of just enough for one meal.

Do you wonder that Norge owners report household savings up to $11 a month? Many tell of even greater savings.

Investigate Rollator Refrigeration before you select your refrigerator. See the Norge before you buy.
