Commissioners Commended

With almost every necessity and luxury of life soaring skyward, Farmville citizens are rejoicing over the ten per cent reduction in their electric current statements received this week, which discount will be allowed if the bill is paid by the 10th of the month. And we are bold to prophecy the best collection for the next few days that this department has experienced.

Ever alert to the economies-of-administration and awake to the needs of the town as a whole, the Board of Aldermen, composed of Dr. W. M. Willis, George W. Davis, J. W. Joyner, J. M. Stancil and Arch Flanagan, and headed by Mayor John B. Lewis, are always seeking channels by which a real service to the citizens as individuals may be affected. This act of lessening the cost of current is one of the most commendable of any step taken in months in behalf of the citizens in our opinion, for it actually puts pennies and dollars back into the purse of every family having the good fortune to live here.

We understand a further cut is being contemplated and would suggest that our townspeople, who have observed and approve of this praiseworthy effort to save them hundreds of dollars each month, express their appreciation vocally or by letter to those who are responsible for this saving.

Many Vegetables Grown in Winter

The fall and winter garden should be a source of fresh vegetables for every rural family during the cold weather months, says Miss Mary E. Thomas, extension nutritionist at State College.

The primary objective of the fall and winter garden contest, sponsored by the extension service, is to stimulate the growing of more vegetable during this period of the year.

The contest is open to any home garden grown by a rural family in North Carolina. Details about the contest and the prizes may be obtained from county farm or home demonstration agents, Miss Thomas said.

The following suggestions regarding fall and winter gardens have been recommended by H. R. Niswonger and E. B. Morrow, extension horticulturists at the college.

In eastern North Carolina most of the fall and winter vegetables should be planted in September. It is too late for the tender crops, but the hardier vegetables will produce a good yield if planted now.

Among the vegetables to start at this time are: Siberian and green curled Scotch kale, head lettuce, mustard, spinach, turnips, radishes, and broccoli.

Cabbage and onion seed may be sown in outdoor beds the latter part of the month and transplanted in December, January, or February, depending upon local climatic conditions.

In western North Carolina the tender vegetables must be given time to mature before the first killing frost, which usually occurs around the middle of October. For this year's crop, the plantings yet to be made must be limited to the hardier vegetables which will withstand cold weather and heavy freezes.

Exhibits in the Fat Cattle Show to be held at Asheville on October 9 will be entered by numerous farmers and 4-H club boys from western North Carolina.

Most of the checks for the first cotton rental payment this year have been delivered. The total payment to North Carolina growers is now in excess of $2,500,000.

COMMON CAUSE OF BALDNESS

One of the chief causes of premature gray hair, falling hair and ultimate baldness is the accumulation of acid in the scalp. This acid is produced by the action of bacteria on the scalp. It is the only cause of baldness that can be cured. It is the only cause of baldness that can be cured. It is the only cause of baldness that can be cured.
