

'Honeymoon Mountain' Praised by Reviewer
in New York Times

New Novel Chosen as Serial for This Newspaper.

"Honeymoon Mountain," the latest novel by Frances Shelley Wees, this paper's newest serial story, brought forth the following comment by the New York Times:

"A determined young lover will find a way, even if it is a very roundabout one. The author has hedged in her young lovers with more obstacles than there were in the rocky mountain roads round the home where pretty Deborah lived in the wilderness of Oregon. The clearing up of her problems makes an appealing romance with a pleasant mixture of the old-fashioned and the ultra modern."

There's a spring-morning freshness to this story that carries you along with a thrilling sense of anticipation. Deborah's mother had made an unhappy marriage and her grandparents, reared her in the absolute seclusion of a mountain estate. At twenty-one, unspoiled and naive, she was to marry a handpicked suitor and then come into her fortune. When the prospective husband proved impossible, Bryn stepped in as a substitute, ostensibly for the $50,000 he was offered. The young man's gallant struggle to win his shy but proud young wife makes a tale you'll long remember.

Frances Shelley Wees is a native of Oregon, the locale of this serial. California and Alberta, Canada, have been her homes since childhood. She is descended, on the maternal side, from Canadians of English extraction. Her father's people are Americans, having begun their westward migration in Revolutionary times.

Though quite a newcomer in the literary world, her rise has been marked with success. Some of her popular novels are "The Mystery of the Creeping Man," "Romance Island," and "The Maestro Murders." Read her latest as it unfolds serially in this paper.

Good Seed Necessary For High Corn Yield

The 2,489,000 acres of corn harvested in North Carolina last year exceeded the combined acreage of cotton, tobacco, and the small grains.

Corn is grown in every county of the State and on 91 per cent of the farms, said Dr. G. K. Middleston, in charge of corn and small grain research for the N. C. Agricultural Experiment Station.

Yet the average corn yield per acre in the State is only 18 bushels, he said. A good farmer should secure yields three times this amount.

In fact, he stated, yields of 95 to 100 bushels per acre have been produced in this State.

Good seed of a variety well adapted to the soil and climatic conditions of the farm is one of the most important factors in producing a heavy yield.

The importance of selecting a well suited variety may be illustrated by experiments conducted at the coastal plain branch experiment station at Willard.

Latham's Double corn has produced a yield of 54.3 bushels per acre for the past six years. On similar soils the experiment station, Reid's Yellow Dent produced only 37.2 bushels. Some hybrid varieties have been developed that produce heavy yields, Dr. Middleston pointed out, but other hybrids fail to produce anything like as good a crop as the standard varieties. Consequently, he urged farmers to stick to varieties known to be good until the hybrids have been definitely proven to be of value. Information regarding the best varieties for North Carolina may be obtained from county farm agents or the agricultural editor at State College.

Try CARDUI For Functional Monthly Pains

Women from the 'teen age to the change of life have found Cardui genuinely helpful for the relief of functional monthly pains due to lack of just the right strength from the food they eat. Mrs. Crit Haynes, of Essex, Mo., writes: "I used Cardui when a girl for cramps and found it very beneficial. I have recently taken Cardui during the change of life. I was very nervous, had head and back pains and was in a generally run-down condition. Cardui has helped me greatly."

Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.
