THE STORY

CHAPTER II.—Tubby and Bryn await Deborah in a hotel in Frisco. Over a period of one year the groom is to prove he is no fortune hunter and can make Deborah happy to the satisfaction of her grandmother. Otherwise the fortune is to go to charity. The will is somewhat ambiguous as to whom Deborah is to marry. The girl arrives with Holworthy. Tubby is surprised to find her charming and sweet, and greatly bewildered. The wedding over, the couple arrives at the home of Deborah's grandmother. The grandmother, Mrs. Bryn, who she believes to be Stuart, take to one another, which somewhat displeases Deborah, who foresees difficulty when they are to separate.

"A man who understands horses, knows where they may be obtained, and can care for them."

Bryn looked up with amused eyes. "You're evidently going to be taught to ride, Deborah." His eyes went again to the list.

"Ten pounds of the best Jasmine tea."

"Eight dollars a pound," Gary breathed. "That's her special blend."

"A cow, or sufficient cows to give plenty of rich cream."

"Well," Bryn said after a moment, "it's a fairly good beginning. I don't suppose she's heard of electric refrigerators, or vacuum cleaners, or radios, or any number of other modern inventions. The magazines will undoubtedly help, unless we go over them first and cut out all the advertisements."

Deborah sprang up. "Oh, what's the use of all this?" she cried. "I won't have you laughing at her. It's no use making fun. She thinks . . . she thinks we can manage anything now. She doesn't know. However am I going to tell her? What am I going to do?"

Gary turned away and began to walk up and down the floor, desperate. Deborah ran to the door and stood gazing out over the lovely peace and quiet of the June morning.

"It's all we can do to pay the taxes," Gary said at last.

There was a silence.

Deborah came back to the table. "I'll have to pretend I'm ill," she said. "I'll have to say 'I've a pain in my heart, or something like that. Something that can't stand excitement. That's the only thing.'"

Gary stared at her. But it was Bryn who objected. "You might as well tell her the truth," he said, "because specialists come high. We wouldn't be any better off."

"Let's tell her the truth," Gary said sharply. "Let's tell her, Miss Deborah. We're getting in too deep."

Bryn rose and said, "the way out has just occurred to me. Mr. Holworthy."

Deborah caught her breath. "What could he do?"

"He knows the circumstances. He could advance us the money we need."

"But will he?"

"We can try. I think he will. In the meantime, we can buy the smaller things. . . . I have a little money of my own, a few hundreds. I am happy to put them at our mutual disposal. And when we go into town, Deborah, we can mail a letter to Mr. Holworthy."

"We can't take your money."

"Nonsense. Of course you can take my money. You can give me a note, if you like, and pay me interest. I can't possibly use it myself up here, can I? So it's settled."

Gary drew a deep breath of relief. "I'd thought of borrowing before," he said. "But until Miss Deborah was married, we didn't have any prospects of paying it back. Now it's all right. I can see it's all right. If you don't mind lending what you have, sir."

"I don't like borrowing," Deborah continued to protest, her cheeks flaming. "We're taking enough from you. We can't take any more."

Gary turned toward her. "If we don't go through with it, if you tell your grandmother now, then this gentleman won't get his money at the end of the year. You know what your grandmother will do. You know how terrified she is of fortune hunters. She can't keep a little bit of the money for you, and she'd be afraid to keep it all. She wouldn't recognize this marriage. It's too late to marry anybody else; your birthday is past. If we told your grandmother the whole truth, that your grandmother would be married to a stranger, paid to marry you, she would die. It would kill her. And then, maybe you could get the money, but it would kill your grandmother."

Deborah listened, her eyes dark and smoldering. She lifted them at last to Bryn. "So it's just as a safeguard for yourself that you're offering your money?" she asked icily.

"Something of the sort," Bryn said with truth.

CHAPTER IV

Bryn went upstairs to the south wing where his own room lay. He entered, sat down at the small writing table before the window, lifted the leather case from the floor beside him, unlocked it, took out writing paper, and began a letter to Tubby. After the usual jocular greetings Bryn asked him to procure ten pounds of Jasmine tea from an old Chinese friend of theirs, a cook from an employment agency, three handkerchiefs and a hanger.

Crop Rotations Build Soil; Prevent Erosion

Erosion control and maintenance of soil fertility depends to a large extent upon suitable rotation of crops, according to A. H. Veasey, chief agronomist of the Soil Conservation Service in North Carolina.

"This state is facing no greater problem than that of planning and adopting crop rotations," he said.

Veasey recommends rotations including grasses, clover, lespedezas, and other legumes which add organic matter and nitrogen to the soil thereby improving its chemical and mechanical condition. These crops also increase the water-holding capacity of the soil.

Cross-growing grasses and legumes bind and hold the soil and reduce to a minimum losses from washing.

On North Carolina's badly-eroded areas, where the fertility has been either washed away or used up by planting the same crop in the same field year after year, Veasey considers grasses and legumes necessities for rebuilding the soil.

Many farmers now recognize the importance of crop rotation for erosion control and soil building. They are devoting an increasing number of acres to rotations recommended by the North Carolina Extension Service.

An acquaintance became a friend as soon as you discover that he has a sense of humor.

LONG TRUCK TIRE MILEAGE DEPENDS ON THREE THINGS

Use Of Proper Tire, Correct Air Pressure, Proper Matching of Duals Aid Good Performance

The three most important factors responsible for satisfactory truck tire performance have been outlined by W. C. Wooten, manager of the Farmville Service Station, local dealers for The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company.

"The first factor in satisfactory truck tire performance is that the proper tire should be used to suit the load carried," Mr. Wooten explained. "The second is correct adjustment of inflation to operating conditions and the third is correct matching of dual tires."

"Overloading reduces tire mileage. For instance, if a tire is carrying a 120 per cent load, it will give but 70 per cent of its possible mileage."

Truck tires, of course, should be kept at recommended pressures to insure maximum mileage.

"In correct matching of duals, it is important that two tires which vary more than one-half inch in outside diameters not be matched."

"There are but a few of the things that truck operators should keep in mind to get the best possible service out of their tires. Correct inflation to recommended pressures is especially important, and to insure that truck tires serviced by our concern receive proper attention, we have on our wall a huge chart prepared by Goodyear which gives inflation pressures in detail for all sizes of truck tires, and also gives detailed instructions for loads, matching of dual tires and other important information."

"Truckers are invited to take advantage of our service for we see just as anxious as they are to see that they get the utmost service from their tires," Mr. Wooten concluded.

Laxative combination folks know is trustworthy

The confidence thousands of parents have in good, old reliable, powdered Theodor's Black-Draught has prompted them to get the new Syrup of Black-Draught for their children. The grown folks stick to the powdered Black-Draught; the youngsters probably will prefer it when they outgrow their childish love of sweets. Mrs. C. W. Adams, of Murray, Ky., writes: "I have used Theodor's Black-Draught (powder) for out this-teen years, taking it for biliousness. Black-Draught acts well and I am always pleased with the results. I wanted a good, reliable laxative for my children. I have found Syrup of Black-Draught to be just that."

LET'S TALK TRUCK PRICES!

ALL THREE

Yes, it pays to look first at the price when you compare America's three lowest-priced trucks. Many truck buyers are literally amazed when they see how close together the delivered prices are!

ONLY A FEW DOLLARS DIFFERENCE

One way or the other, there is only a few dollars difference today between any corresponding models of the three lowest-priced trucks. This is especially true when wheelbase is considered.

SO PRICE MEAN NOTHING

This means one thing sure! You don't need to consider price at all today when you compare lowest-priced trucks. Just get a "show-down" on features. Figure what you get for your money.

NOW COMPARE VALUES

Only one low-priced truck engine gives you exhaust valve seat inserts, full-length water jackets, aluminum alloy pistons, 4 piston rings, spray-cooled exhaust valve seats, oil cooling. That truck is DODGE!

Only one truck of the lowest-priced three gives you hydraulic brakes proved in many years of actual truck operation. DODGE pioneered this money-saving, safety feature.

Full-floating rear axle is another of the many quality features pioneered by DODGE in low-priced trucks. DODGE introduced the full-floating rear axle to save upkeep expense, make your truck more dependable.
