PROGRESS FOR SOLDIERS

We hadn't thought of it but Major Edgar E. Hume calls attention to the absence of any epidemic of major proportions in the camps of the CCC and points out that this indicates that modern medical protection will save the lives of soldiers in the "next war."

It is undoubtedly true that scientific advances in medicine, surgery, sanitation and diagnosis have made war-born plagues less likely to strike down armies. Now, if some progress will be made toward making these advances available to all the people of the world, even in times of peace, the civilization of the globe could be marked up a peg or two.

LIFE SURE, BUT NOT LONGER.

The Census Bureau having released new life tables showing that life expectancy has advanced from under 50 to about 61 years, moves many writers to remark that "life grows longer" and to speculate upon the extra 11 years added to man's life.

The truth is that life is not longer but that it is surer. The baby born in the United States today has a much surer chance of surviving to manhood or womanhood, but it has no basis to expect to live 11 years longer than the adults of the years behind us.

Life expectation tables are based upon the age of death for millions of people, including babies that dies within the first years. Obviously if two babies are born and one dies in infancy and one at sixty, the average, or life expectancy, is 30 years. If the two babies had lived to 40 years of age and then died, the average, or expectancy would have been forty years. However, the length of life of the individual baby would have been increased.

From this example, it should be seen that "life expectancy" may advance considerably through the better care of new-born babies without making it probable that years are being added to average life. This is shown by the recent statement of Dr. Eleix Carrel that a middle-aged man today has a smaller chance to live to be 80 than his grandfather did. However, a baby born in 1936, has a far greater chance of becoming an adult that the babies that were born in, say 1900.

IN MEMORIAM OF JOHN WESLEY WILKERSON

(18-Months-Old Son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Wilkerson.)

Remembering that there is a Supreme Being, who doeth all things in accordance to His Will, we should realize that it behooves us to recognize that our near and dear ones are significant of our lives being only loaned to us day by day—just as our daily bread is given—and our journey through Life is measured by the heart-beats, the breath we breathe, each, one at a time, the miles we travel are made step by step, on through the journey of Life itself—be it long or short—it has a beginning and ending.

The seasons come and go; time and tide wait for no man; the flowers bloom and fade; history repeats itself, stars twinkle and sometimes fall; destiny reveals the "unfathomable caves of ocean bare," memories sometimes slowly fades away and are lost to the doom of oblivion itself; the darkest hour is just before the dawn; twilight appears only at sunset's glow.

Separation on this earth only means an opportunity to meet in Heaven. Hence we should weep not but reconcile ourselves to God. He doeth all things well. UNCLE WATT.
