Grandmother went to bed early, tired from a hard day, Deborah and Bryn sat near the door, and looked across at the moon. "I can't believe that you're real, and that you love me, and that we're here together, alone," he said. "Tell me again, Deborah."

She told him again, and when Deborah looked at him she knew that she loved him for always, and when he spoke his voice rang in her heart.

After a long time he rose. "You'd better get to bed, sweetheart," he said, and his voice held the deep low note in it she was beginning to understand. "It's been a long day for you, too."

"Are you coming up too?" "I'll take you up. I'll carry you up," he decided, and slipped his arms beneath her. They reached the top at last, and were in her sitting room.

"Why did you wear your wedding dress tonight?" he asked. "Oh, Deborah murmured, "just because. Do you . . . like it?"

"I'll never forget the first time I saw you in it, Deborah." She looked up at him. "This is the last time I'm going to wear it," she

"Oh, Bryn, you are a big silly," she said. "It's so delicate, and old. I'm going to save it for . . . that is, I'm going to save it." "Aren't you going to wear it just

Timely Farm Questions Answered at State College

Question: How can I inoculate soil for seeding hairy vetch this fall?

Answer: In the mountain and the Piedmont sections the best method is to moisten the seed with water and molasses and then mix them with from 200 to 300 pounds of soil from a yield known to be inoculated. If this cannot be done, a good commercial culture may be used. In the Coastal Plains, especially on the sandier soils, it is advisable to use 200 to 300 pounds of soil from a field that is already inoculated for vetch. If this is impossible, use either of the other methods with a good application of stable manure. It sometimes takes two or three crops of vetch to establish the inoculation thoroughly and it is therefore best to start on a small scale.

Question: When should pullets be moved to winter quarters?

Answer: This transfer should be made from two to four weeks before the average pullets start to lay, or certainly by the time they are in 25 per cent production. This often causes a conflict as, in many cases, the hens are laying too well to be disturbed and the pullets are ready to take their place. When the pullets are well matured, of high quality and are in 25 per cent lay, then they should be given the preference. If the pullets are immature and of inferior quality it would be best to sell them and keep the hens, as it is a mistake to replace superior hens with immature or inferior pullets.

Question: When should skim-milk be substituted for whole milk in feeding the young calf?

Answer: The substitution should begin when the calf is four weeks old. One-half pint of skim-milk should be substituted for whole milk at each feeding and continued until all whole milk is replaced. At this time the calf should be getting about two quarts of skim-milk at each feeding. This amount should be gradually increased until the animal is receiving from four to five quarts. The grain feed should also be increased until the calf is eating about three pounds of grain a day at six months of age. The skim-milk is then gradually discontinued and the grain feed increased.

The report is that the "unidentified" plane which dropped bombs near the U. S. Kane, in Spanish waters, was one supplied to the warring faction by a large European power.

Treat Small Grain to Free Seed from Smuts

Smuts in wheat and barley can best be controlled by treating the seeds with fungicides or hot water to kill the fungus organisms.

Planting seed that has never been infected also is good, said Dr. Luther Shaw, extension plant pathologist at State College, but sometimes it is hard to get seed perfectly free from disease.

A few smutty heads in a field are capable of infesting a large percentage of the seed produced on the farm, and threshing machines can spread the spores from one farm to another.

Oat smuts can be controlled either by planting a disease-resisting variety or by treating the seed with a fungicide, Dr. Shaw added.

The treatment recommended differs from the type of smut and the kind of seed.

Treat loose smut by immersing the seed in hot water. Keep wheat 10 minutes in water that has been heated to 129 degrees Fahrenheit. Barley should be left 13 minutes in water with a temperature of 126 degrees.

A fungicide dust will kill the covered smut spores. Treat wheat with 1-2 ounce of ethyl mercury phosphate dust to each bushel of seed, or two to 2-1-2 ounces of copper carbonate dust (50 per cent copper).

Both covered and black loose smuts in barley may be eradicated by dusting each bushel of seed with 1-1-2 ounce of ethyl mercury phosphate dust or three ounces of formaldehyde dust.

This last treatment will also kill covered and loose smut in oats.

The simplest and most effective home-made machine to use in treating seed with fungicidal dusts is the barrel mixer. It should not cost more than $5 to make and with proper care it should last indefinitely.

A diagram showing how to make such a duster, together with a detailed discussion of smuts and smut control methods may be secured free from Dr. Luther Shaw, State College, Raleigh.
