issue, by which we mean, the factor that most influences the voters because very often the candidates do not know the answer themselves.

We face an unusual situation in the business world, where conditions are greatly improved, with something like an approach to real prosperity, spotted as our recovery is at this stage, but with business generally proclaimed in enmity against the administration. Of course, this is denied in some quarters, but, in the higher circles of business and finance there can be little doubt of the opposition to the President and, consequently support of Governor Landon. How many voters will this affect? The answer is not on any blackboard and the situation can only be set down as one of the factors to be considered.

Offsetting the attitude of business there is great enthusiasm for the President in Labor circles, with general belief that he will get from 80 to 90 per cent of the vote of organized labor. This, it is admitted, he did not have four years ago. Will it offset his losses among the so-called upper crust or cancel the defections of business leaders? Will unorganized labor follow the lead of the unionized workers or will they give a more willing ear to the blandishments of employers? There is talk to be found on both sides of this question but, in general, the President stands high with working people and seems reasonably certain to have an edge among this group.

Where the farmer will throw his weight is a question on which there is agreement in only one respect, that both sides claim his fealty and admit that if either gets his general support the election is in the bag. Undoubtedly, the big problem at the beginning of Gov. Landon's campaign was to cut into the popularity of the President with the farmers. Agriculture has been improved a great deal in the past three years, regardless of what you may read—and the farmers had been greatly impressed. Have they been turned toward the Republican nominee, in the vital western areas, by the campaign of Governor Landon and his discussion of farm politics? If you know the answer to this question you can get your price from either side.

Again, we come to a factor, new in the present campaign, the men and women who have been assisted by the activity of the government under the general head of relief. Many of them, in the past, have been life-long Republicans. Have they swept from their moorings? Has the use of government money created a new support for the party in power, a source of strength that depends upon largesses from the public treasury and a block of voters to be fought for in future elections and won by the most liberal promises? If this has not come about, will these men and women, or an appreciable majority of them, vote for President Roosevelt through a sense of gratitude for what has been done for them? It is upon the answer to this question that millions of votes depend.

There are, of course, other issues. These include the Red charge of the Hearst newspapers, the attacks of Father Coughlin, the allegation of waste and extravagance, the balanced budget debate, the reciprocal trade treaties, the process of constitutional government, the centralization of authority, the rights of the States, the social security legislation, the expenditure of huge sums for armament, the broad question of war and peace, the international situation, the allegations of corruption and a number of other matters. Each of them could be discussed at length, but space forbids. They will affect votes, it is true, but how many is the question that awaits answer.

Two weeks ago, in this column, the writer gave a preliminary survey of the election results, as indicated by the various polls being conducted. There has been little change in the general situation then recorded. The battle is still going on and the outcome is not certain. However, there is just a hint that the tide of warfare is beginning to move and it may be that, in another two weeks, the polls will indicate more definite results. We are keeping up with the forecasters and you can look for their arrows in this column two weeks later. They will not point in the same direction and there will be many conflicting values but, if possible, we will attempt to call the turn of the ballots next week.

SEES NEW CAR

DETROIT—"I was just fortunate enough to get an advanced look at the new 1937 Dodge," says Eugene B. Meek. "If everybody falls like I did, millions will want to change to Dodge this year. Dodge certainly gets my vote for giving America such a big, economical car at such a low price."

AVALANCHE VICTIMS FOUND

Leon, Norway—Among the 25 bodies of the victims recovered in the Lake Leon Valley after the avalanche and flood snuffed out seventy-four lives, was the body of a man killed in a similar catastrophe in 1905. The icy waters of the lake had preserved it sufficiently to permit identification after thirty-one years.
